Pompidou Rejects NATO Step

BRUSSELS (AP) — President Georges Pompidou has decided against a step that would have brought France back closer to military integration with the United States, West Germany and its other North Atlantic allies, informed sources report.

The decision was transmitted in a letter from French Ambassador Francois Tricornot de Rose to his colleagues on the North Atlantic Council. An informed official said the letter stated that France maintains its place in the alliance but would not join in the NATO Integrated Communications System, or NICS. The letter was received May 26.

"I don't know if it was the word integrated that put them off," one NATO official said. "If we had thought about it, we could have chosen another word."

De Rose's letter reportedly said the French government is going to improve its own communications system and it will remain technically compatible with NATO's. This would make it easier for France to join the integrated system at some future time.

President Charles de Gaulle withdrew French forces from NATO's integrated commands in 1966, although French membership in the alliance continued. One of De Gaulle's strongest supporters, Michel Debre, is France's minister of defense.

NICS is one of two projects that 10 of NATO's European members are planning in an attempt to dampen American criticism that the Europeans aren't doing enough for their own defense. The other project will provide better shelter for military aircraft against attack.

Announcement of the plans last December was followed by a pledge from President Nixon not to reduce U.S. forces

The NICS project calls for the completion by 1980 of a modern communications grid, using satellites, radio and commercial land lines, for the use of both military and civilian officials of the alliance and its members.

When it is completed, an official in Ottawa will be able to dial a division commander in Turkey and get him in 30 seconds or less.

Cleaning Flat Creek

The first batch of hay strewn on gasoline-polluted Flat Creek was being removed Wednesday morning. More hay will have to be used to soak up the floating gasoline and the cleaning work may take a few more days, according to one of the men working at the site of the leak from a Phillips 66 Petroleum Co. pipeline. Here, Richard Dittman, left, Mora, and Hank Askey, Route 1, remove the straw from the creek, which now emits noxious fumes. At least 20,000 fish died as a result of the gas leak.

Property Assessment Drop Noted in New City Budget

By KEITH A. OWEN
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

Three major issues which came before the City Council Tuesday night—the 1971-72 budget, a rate increase request by Cablevision, Inc., and a mobile home ordinance question. All dealt with, plus an unanticipated issue prompted by Monday's $50,000 fire in the 32nd Street annexation area.

For the first time in several years, the council approved the new fiscal budget exactly as proposed by the Finance Committee. This year's budget features a reduction in property assessment from $2.32 to $1.82 per $100 assessed valuation, a $384,419 expenditure for capital improvements, $84,494 for new equipment and an increase of about $80,000 for street and alley maintenance.

The council budgeted $2,050,089 of the estimated $2,170,127 worth of expected revenue and held 6 per cent, or $120,038, in reserve.

Mayor Jerry Jones, in his annual report to the council, said the reduction in property taxes, which was promised earlier, was made possible by the passage of the city sales tax. Several councilmen mentioned that the large capital improvements and equipment purchases expenditures were also made feasible through sales tax revenue.

In his statement, Jones said: "These capital improvements include (the) new fire station, swimming pool, park improvements, capital improvements in our street system and sewer system, police, fire, library and cemetery departments.

"All of these improvements will be long-term, and can be pointed to with pride by all Sedalians," he said.

Money set aside for equipment purchases, he said, would affect every department in the city and would "allow city government to expand and improve our services."

Also in the report was a recommendation that the city establish a Commission on Environmental Quality.

"Sedalia is very fortunate," Jones said, "that we do not have any serious pollution problems at the present time, and I believe we should be very much aware of maintaining and improving our quality of life."

He said he had a copy of a "Model City Ordinance" concerning such a commission, and would refer it to the Printing and Ordinance Committee for its study and recommendation.

Action on the proposed $1 monthly Cablevision rate hike was postponed at the request of James Buckley. Buckley, Cablevision's local attorney, stated company executive Ed Drake telephoned him from Washington late Tuesday afternoon, explaining that new information was available on the matter. Buckley said the information would be received here sometime in the next few days, and asked that any final decision be delayed at least until the next council meeting.

Although no mention was made of it in the regular council meeting, new avenues of alleviating problems with mobile homes were discussed in the pre-council session.

After considerable discussion among councilmen, the idea of a new zoning classification emerged. When consulted, Robert Fritz, city counselor, revealed that a zoning classification allowing singke-width trailers is possible and has even been used by other cities to deal with the problem. He added that only through such a zoning change or an amendment to the recently-passed mobile home ordinance can the current problem be dealt with. Several councilmen indicated that a more suitable situation concerning mobile homes may be attainable through a new type of zoning law or by some other method.

Luther Jordan, 32nd and Grand, appeared before the council complaining about inadequate fire protedtion services in his area. Jordan, one of the leading opponents to the annexation of the 32nd Street tract, said he was prompted to come by the $50,000 fire at Chaney's Seed House, South Highway 65, early Tuesday morning.

It was emphasized that the list of appropriations includes only the operating departments and not the various funded accounts and special funds maintained by the city.

Draft Talks See No Break

WASHINGTON (AP) — With no apparent break in the deadlock over a war-pullout amendment, House-Senate conferees faced new efforts today to work out a two-year renewal of the draft which expired a week ago.

Although conference spokesmen have announced Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield's amendment urging a U.S. pullout from Indochina in nine months is the only unresolved issue, House backers of a volunteer army were pressing for reconsideration of a $2.4-billion military pay compromise.

Several conferees said there have been no informal efforts during the week to work out a compromise on Mansfield's amendment, which would not be binding on the President.

Mansfield told newsmen Tuesday he "would be glad to look at any change" to his amendment but said no conferees had approached him with such compromise proposals.

Teamsters Moving From Hoffa Power

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Teamsters union, under the new leadership of Frank E. Fitzsimmons, is visibly moving out from under the long shadow of James R. Hoffa's troubled reign.

A special message from President Nixon, a warmly received visit by one of his Cabinet members and friendly speeches by AFL-CIO leaders would have been unthinkable under the now imprisoned Hoffa.

But they all happened at the convention of the two million-member Union this week.

"It is all too often taken for granted that the daily efforts of Teamsters union members are a cornerstone of the American economic structure," said Nixon's message to Fitzsimmons. It was read to the 2,100 delegates by Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson.

"The confidence that I have in your future course, reinforced by our useful discussions, assures me that by working together we can make steady advances in our common objectives," Nixon said, after listing the goals of a healthy economy and jobs at good wages.

Many Teamsters had long chafed silently under adverse publicity the union received from Hoffa's 10-year fight with federal courts, Congress, the White House and other labor leaders until he landed in prison four years ago for jury tampering and mail fraud.

"It gives us a cloak of respectability that is beautiful," Teamsters Vice President Harold Gibbons of St. Louis said of the warm attention from the Nixon administration.

Nixon had also visited Fitzsimmons and other members of the Teamsters Executive Board at a meeting here June 21, the day Hoffa resigned and two weeks before the convention opened.

"That kind of recognition of our union is progress in any league," said Teamsters Secretary-Treasurer Thomas E. Flynn.

Amid rumors that Hoffa may soon be paroled, Fitzsimmons flatly discounted rumors that Hoffa would run the Teamsters from behind the scenes.

"I don't know the anticipation of Hoffa," said Fitzsimmons, "but if I'm elected the power remains with me."

Nixon Meets With Media

By GINGER MOORE
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

KANSAS CITY — President Nixon addressed members of the news media from 13 states here Tuesday on a wide variety of topics. The main theme of his speech was that the American public should not allow their vision of the total world situation to be obscured by a single picture.

As Nixon himself stated, there was "nothing new to report on Vietnam." He noted that casualties have dropped considerably and that the U. S. is "actively pursuing negotiations" for the release of prisoners of war and a permanent peace.

A comparison of the world powers immediately following World War II and today was made by Nixon, as he cited the pre-eminence of the United States after the war in military and economic strength, and the presence of five power centers today. Nixon named the U. S., Western Europe, Japan, Russia, and China as these centers.

In including Japan on the list, Nixon predicted that in two years Japan will produce more steel than the U.S., although five years ago it produced only minimal amounts by comparison.

Nixon also said that it was time for the U.S. to de-isolate mainland China. He told of the new policies to lift trade and travel restrictions which he felt "opened the door" for further negotiations. "We must move carefully, however," he said.

The President, sounding very much like a political candidate, stated that he felt that all this presented a great challenge to the U.S., and that in order to meet this challenge it was necessary to have "healthy people, a healthy environment and a healthy economy."

President Nixon . . . . . in Kansas City

In reference to earlier presentations by Elliott Richardson, secretary of health, education and welfare, Nixon pointed out the need for his various welfare and health reform proposals before Congress.

The suggestion of wage and price controls was put aside by Nixon with the comment that, "It would take more than the 47,000 persons it did to operate the Office of Price Administration during World War II to be at all effective." Nixon also pointed out that the use of wage and price controls would also call for rationing, which he called "a widely disliked practice."

In summarizing his talk, Nixon said that the foundation of physical, environmental and economic health was the moral health of the nation.

While expressing confidence that everything will turn out right for the country, the chief executive likened the United States today to ancient Greece and Rome on the eve of their declines from greatness.

"I think of what happened to Greece and to Rome, and you see what is left — only the pillars. What has happened, of course, is that great civilizations of the past, as they have become wealthy, as they have lost their will to live, to improve, they then have become subject to the decadence that eventually destroys the civilization.

"The United States is now reaching that period."

Nixon went on to say he was convinced Americans have the vitality, courage and strength "out through this heartland and across this nation" to infuse America with "moral and spiritual strength" as well as wealth and power.

"But I also know," he said, "that people need to be reassured. The people who can

Pool Hours Topic For Park Board

The Sedalia Park Board agreed Tuesday night to keep Liberty Park Swimming Pool open during regular hours regardless of the number of swimmers using the facility.

The board did decide during their regular monthly meeting Tuesday night that the number of employes may be decreased in accordance with the number of swimmers in the pool. Regular operating hours of the pool are 1 to 9 p.m. each day.

In the past the pool had been closing earlier if the number of swimmers was small. Under the plan adopted Tuesday, the pool will close early only when the weather conditions prohibit its operation.

The rule changed after a few season ticket holders complained they found the pool closed before the usual 9 p.m. closing time.

In other business, the board accepted a bid of $2,345 from Mike O'Connor Chevrolet-Buick-GMC Co., for a new pickup truck.

A bid of $1,200 was accepted from Leo Gerke to replace the concrete flooring of the front porch on Convention Hall. Gerke's bid was the only one received.

The awarding of a contract to repair Convention Hall where needed was tabled by the board until certain specifications can be drawn up.

The board elected officers for 1971 with Bob Beykirch, retaining the presidency, Jim Grady elected vice-president and Ray Young elected secretary-treasurer.

Other park board members include Jack Cunningham, Wallace McCown, George Ray, Vaughn Hart, Benny Carter and Gail Hawkins. Hawkins replaced Joe Smetana, whose term ended at the end of June.

Corn Leaf Blight Noted in County

Southern corn leaf blight has been discovered in Pettis County, as well as all surrounding counties, but at this point poses no real threat, according to Vic Carothers, extension agronomy specialist.

Carothers said most of the infection is thought to be caused by blight carry-over spores from last year, and is most noticeable in volunteer corn.

"We don't see any real serious problem yet," Carothers said, but added that progress of the corn-killing disease is being watched closely.

Carothers said Southern corn leaf blight has been confirmed in 51 Missouri counties so far. In Pettis County the cases are fairly widely scattered, he said.

Confirmation that blight existed in the county was made by Dr. Einar Palm, extension plant pathologist at the University of Missouri-Columbia, Carothers said.

Carothers said the corn blight does not pose as serious a threat this year as it did in 1970, when it cut sharply into the corn harvest in many counties. He said the fact that corn is extremely early this year, well-rooted and growing rapidly are factors that will work against spread of the blight.

"Folks shouldn't get unduly alarmed, because there isn't much to be done about it," Carothers added.

Carothers said certain types of seed are proving highly resistant to the blight, and cited the "N" type seed as one of the most successful.

At this point, he added, lack of heavy rains poses more of a problem for the corn crop than does blight.

State Department Plans An Update on Diplomacy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has announced a reorganization it says will lead the nation out of the country-store era of diplomacy and reform a foreign-service corps criticized for making conformity a virtue.

The main design of the program, according to Deputy Undersecretary of State William B. Macomber, is to centralize responsibility at the higher levels and turn policymaking into a systematic operation.

"This effort is needed at this time," Macomber said Tuesday. "Since World War II there has been enormous change in the scope . . . of diplomacy and it is tough for foreign-service officers to adjust."

A result of this adjustment difficulty, according to State Department officials, has been a gradual yielding of power over foreign policymaking to the White House and other agencies.

The reorganization amounts at the higher level to several changes in titles—including elevating Undersecretary of State John Irwin to deputy secretary—and a rearrangement of responsibilities among the assistant secretaries.

Changing the title of the department's No. 2 man, Macomber said, emphasizes that Irwin "is now a real chief of staff," the secretary's "alter ego" in day-to-day charge of American foreign policy in and out of the department.

Macomber said reform in the foreign-service-officer personnel policy may be the most important long-run result of the reorganization. The idea, he said, is to "get better people—more specialists under a better promotion system."

Under the old foreign-service-officer program—likened by some department officials to a guillotine approach—career diplomats were selected on the basis of a tough competitive examination stressing general knowledge.

This has led, officials say, to a situation in which other government experts no longer trust foreign-service officers to make a knowledgeable decision in specialized areas.

Once in, a foreign-service officer faced intense pressure to maintain a steady promotion rate or face being "selected out."

This "highly competitive promotion system," a department statement said, "tends to make caution a virtue, inhibits such qualities as initiative, persistence and creativity . . ."

To overcome these and other problems, the department says, career diplomats who make the grade after their first five years will be guaranteed at least 20 years in the foreign service, although competition will continue in selecting higher-level officials.

Newsmen See a 'Different' Nixon

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — President Nixon's popularity with the American people probably would improve if he had some manner to meet the public on a person-to-person basis and not be so dependent on television for exposure, several newsmen said Tuesday.

They commented in the aftermath of the President's third in a series of briefings on administration policies for editors and broadcasters from 13 Midwest states.

"The people of the United States ought to see him as this small group saw him," said John Colburn, editor and publisher of the Wichita Eagle-Beacon. "They might not agree with him, but they'd get a different idea of the personality. He comes alive on something like this."

Others who agreed included Bill Mayer, managing editor of the Lawrence Journal-World, and Dan Deming, news director of station KWBW, Hutchinson.

"I was impressed with the fact that the President comes across in a group like that in a much warmer way than he ever comes across on the tube," said Mayer. "If more people could see him like that, I think they would feel he is trying very hard. It made me a little more attuned to his problems. It made me feel here is a man trying real hard to do the right thing."

Deming, saying he was "very impressed with the way he handled himself," said Nixon "came over better on a person-to-person basis better than he does on radio or TV. He seems to lose something on TV that you get when you see him in person."

Reaction to what Nixon had to convey to the editors and broadcasters was mixed.

O.S. Stauffer, publisher of the Topeka Capital-Journal, called the President's message "very inspiring," and added, "He covered the whole spectrum and did a wonderfully good job. Those I talked to were surprisingly well-pleased with it. I say surprisingly because a good many looked at it as just an expedition by the President. I think he made one of the best talks I've ever heard him give. It will do him a lot of good in this part of the country."

Cruise Palmer, executive editor of the Kansas City Star and Times, said the real benefit of the Nixon appearance here was the information disseminated to non-metropolitan newsmen. "I think it's very important," Palmer said, "for the outstate press of Kansas and Missouri to hear firsthand from the administrators and the President."

Bob Chaffin, news director of KAYS AM-TV, Hays, Kan., agreed with Palmer. "We got some background that we don't normally get in western Kansas," Chaffin said. "It fills in some of the gaps that we often get off the wires and off the networks."

Ray Call, editor of the Emporia Gazette, said people in his area are concerned about inflation. "We were pleased to hear what Mr. Nixon and his advisers had to say about the economy," Call said. "They are emphasizing the fight against inflation."

George Burg, another Kansas City Star executive, called Nixon's performance "excellent . . . he stole the show," and added, "Every comment I heard helped him. I was impressed with the man."

On the other side, several expressed varying degrees of skepticism.

Ken Rucker, news director of KFDI, Wichita, said, "I thought it was an enlightening session, but I personally questioned the reality of implementing some of the programs locally." Rucker said he had persuaded Elliot Richardson, secretary of health, education and welfare, to take a personal hand in finding out why federal civil rights officials have blocked giving money to an urban developer project in Wichita.

Stuart Awbrey, editor and publisher of the Hutchinson News, called Nixon's address "a very nice left-over Fourth of July speech," but said he feels it did give a tipoff as to what the President and his administration is thinking about—the 1972 election.

"They are turning their backs on Vietnam and saying, 'This is all over as an issue,' and now they are focusing on these problems of health, welfare and the economy which will bob up in '72," Awbrey said.

"They fluffed off the agriculture problem with a two-minute presentation by Clark MacGregor, who is not particularly known for his expertise."

MacGregor, former Minnesota congressman, is now congressional liaison man for Nixon.

Tom Parmley of WIBW, Topeka, criticized the briefing format because newsmen were not permitted to question Nixon. "It would have been nice if we could have probed his position a little bit," said Parmley. "I was disappointed in the background briefing. I didn't feel I got any information I didn't already know or have access to."

Dick Brewster of KTSB-TV, Topeka, said, "I have no question about the sincerity of the administration officials or the President himself. But the thing that bothers me is the attitude that if we don't wave the flag daily we're less than patriotic."

Two Manhattan newsmen said they believe the briefing will curb some criticism of the administration.

"I came in with considerable misgivings," said Bill Colvin, editor of the Manhattan Mercury. "I didn't want to be led into a selling job. But I think it was an exceptional presentation. It's going to blunt a lot of criticism."

And Paul Darby of KMAN, Manhattan, added, "I'm going to think twice before criticizing them. I think they were honest."

Ann Landers

Childish 'Blabbing' Happens to Adults

Dear Ann Landers: Our son is 23, a college graduate and what you would call a quiet, introverted person. He showed very little interest in girls until last year when he started to see a divorced woman with two children.

To my complete surprise they were married in March. This woman is 35 years old, which makes her exactly six years younger than I am. I was not happy about the marriage but I am keeping my mouth shut. Whenever we have a meal together, I get indigestion.

The problem is that my son's wife has started to call me "Mother" which burns me up. My husband thinks it is hilarious. I am nowhere near old enough to be her mother and she knows it. I'm sure she uses this "mother" bit to make me seem older — and to make herself seem younger. What do you suggest I do about it? — Not Laughing.

Dear Not: The next time your son's wife calls you "Mother," get right to the point. Say, "I'd prefer you called me Geraldine. And I bet your mother would appreciate it, too."

Dear Ann Landers: I am 13 years old and my problem is myself. I have a big mouth. I tell things I have no right to tell — such as other people's secrets. It doesn't make any difference that I promise on my word of honor to keep mum. It doesn't even help when I cross my heart and hope to die. I really mean to keep my word, but when I am with someone I want to impress and we get on the subject of secrets, I find myself spilling everything. Afterwards, I get so mad at myself I could bite my tongue off.

How can I overcome this terrible fault? It is very babyish and I know it. I have promised myself at least a dozen times never to do it again. But somehow I just can't keep my big mouth shut. Can you help me? — Blabbing Without End.

Dear Blab: Telling secrets is not a childhood disease. Many grownups are afflicted with the same problem. Kids call it blabbing. Adults call it "betraying a confidence," but it's the same thing.

Before you can find a cure, you must recognize the cause. Are you aware of why you do this? It's because it makes you feel important to know something that someone else doesn't know. In other words, you do it to build yourself up. The next time you are tempted to betray a friend, tell yourself, "It is more important to be honorable and trustworthy than to look important for one small minute. I will keep my mouth shut." Then do it.

Dear Ann Landers: A girl wrote and asked what her life would be like if she married a compulsive talker. May I be Ann Landers and tell her? I know because I did it.

Dear Girl: You will not have a moment's peace, my dear. He will talk to you while you are reading, watching TV and sleeping. He will talk to you while you are on the phone trying to talk to someone else. He will talk over you and around you.

You will have a nervous breakdown and land in the hospital. When he comes to see you he will say, "Why did you do this to me? I need you at home." Ann Landers says people who talk all the time are sick. She is right. If you marry such a man you will be sick, too. Back away from this nut and marry someone who is normal. — Sorry I Didn't Know Enough.

Dear Sorry: Your letter is most convincing. I hope she listens.

Dispatch Reports Papers

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker recommended in mid 1967 that the United States step up its efforts to win the war in Vietnam, the St. Louis Dispatch reported Tuesday.

In its latest story based on secret Pentagon papers it obtained, the Post-Dispatch said Bunker's recommendation was that the United States step up its military activity in South Vietnam and also bomb the North.

In raiding North Vietnam, the newspaper said, Bunker recommended that U.S. planes bomb "all targets in the North connected with the enemy's war effort that do not result in unacceptable risk of uncontrolled escalation."

A "blueprint for Vietnam," the Post-Dispatch said it was quoting, included the laying out of a plan for expanding the U.S. effort in Southeast Asia following 1967 South Vietnamese elections.

Bunker's mid 1967 memorandum, the newspaper said, incuded the notation that "progress in the war has been steady on all fronts. We can defeat the enemy by patient, continued and concerted effort."

Attempt Welfare Speedup

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's welfare division is trying to speed up monthly payments to avoid loss of $8 million in federal administrative funds Oct. 1.

Welfare Director Proctor N. Carter announced Tuesday checks are being written on a daily basis instead of three times a month.

At the same time, caseworkers in local offices have been instructed to approve applications for aid to dependent children immediately if they meet eligibility requirements.

In addition, Carter said some workers will be shifted from other jobs to handle processing of applications. He said this might result in a request for more staff when the 1972 legislature meets.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare notified Carter last Friday $8 million in administrative funds would be cut unless checks can be mailed to applicants within 30 days. The welfare division has 60 days to investigate and process applications for disability aid.

Carter said Missouri, like other states, has been overwhelmed with applications because of economic conditions and liberalized federal welfare laws.

Compliments Rival On Its New Plant

The Department of Industrial Development's June report, issued by director William Hall, complimented Rival Manufacturing Co. on the opening of its new plant in Clinton, and commended all those who participated in Industrial Appreciation Week last month.

It also says that community profiles have been completed for Hughesville, LaMonte and Houstonia and are being compiled for Smithton and Green Ridge. The report says that the profiles, together with the Department's plant location study, will be available to answer industrial inquiries in the future.

Water had to be transported in tank trucks to fight the fire.

Jordan listed several areas in which he thought the city lacked proper facilities, including too few fire hydrants in the area, not enough fire hose and even the city's decision not to purchase a new fire truck recently. Jordan implied that the city has not lived up to its pledge to give adequate fire protection to residents of his area and asked "Are you going to wait until everything burns down out there and then do something?"

Mayor Jones replied that despite Jordan's somewhat "over-zealous, sarcastic" manner, some possibly valid points had been raised. Jones noted, however, that eight out of 10 of the recently approved hydrants for the area have been installed and work is underway to hook them up.

He also reaffirmed his statements, as quoted by Jordan from The Democrat-Capital, that the city should not have purchased the fire truck recently considered. Work on revised specifications for a truck is scheduled to begin this week, it was learned later from Fire Chief Emmett Vaught.

Also pertinent to Jordan's complaint, Chief Vaught, who was not present at the meeting, explained that had the area not been already annexed, damage during the seed house fire might have been much more extensive.

Vaught said that while only a few months ago the Pettis County fire department would have been forced to battle the fire alone, the two departments worked together Tuesday, hauled water in relay fashion and were able to contain the damage more efficiently. He added that the use of three pumper trucks instead of just one was a key factor in saving surrounding buildings from destruction.

In other action the council approved a Bothwell Hospital request to purchase two lots at 601 East 14th from Mr. and Mrs. Herman Young for $12,500.

The council also passed an ordinance changing the 30-minute parking zone on the south side of 16th in the 300 block to a 15-minute zone.

In routine action the council accepted the resignation of E. Davis Allen from the Sedalia Human Rights Commission; approved a wholesale beer license for Hamm's Sales; granted a liquor-by-the-drink renewal to Bothwell Cocktail Lounge, and renewed a 3.2 per cent beer license for the Stucco Inn, 109 South Grand.

Begin Annual Audit of City Accounts Here

City Clerk Ralph Dedrick told The Democrat-Capital Wednesday that the annual audit of the city's books began last week.

Dedrick said that this year the audit is being handled by the Arthur J. Morgan Co., certified public accountant, 2818 West Main. The audit is expected to last until September.

Working as a two-man team Wednesday were James Harrison, 1411 West 10th, senior auditor, and Phillip Rodick, 1603 West 10th. The city books are audited each year at this time, according to Dedrick, following the close of the fiscal year.

"In recent years, we have been using a different local accounting firm each year," Dedrick said. The decision of who audits the books each year is left to the City Council.

NO WEE DROP

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Irishmen drank 48 pints of beer per capita in the year ending March 31, the Eire Revenue Commission reports.

That amounted to 143 million pints of beer, compared to only 1.5 million gallons of whisky and 1 million gallons of wine.

The tax take from that beverage was $150 million.

Area Fires

SWEET SPRINGS — The Saline County fire department answered a call to the Ronnie Sappington farm six miles northeast of here at 10 p.m. Tuesday.

A grass fire on the farm had been extinguished before the fire truck arrived but the bale of hay where the fire had started was still burning.

The fire was one mile from the Sam Neal farm where a fire destroyed a 7 room house, a barn, a garage, 5,000 bales of hay and farm machinery Saturday night.

Vietnam Standstill Reported

SAIGON (AP) — Laotian government forces pressed a two-prong offensive against the Plain of Jars today as the war in Vietnam faded to a virtual standstill.

Informed sources in Vientiane said six battalions of Gen. Vang Pao's Meo tribesmen—who are trained, paid and equipped by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency—seized the southern rim of the plain, while Air America helicopters carried commando teams to the airfield in the center of the plain 103 miles northeast of Vientiane.

Air America is a charter company under contract to the U.S. government, and its fleet of planes and helicopters provides the backbone of the military logistic system in Laos.

The Plain of Jars has changed hands numerous times in the past decade, with Laotian government forces usually taking it during rainy seasons and the North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao driving them out when the weather improves. The main east-west highway across central Laos passes through the plain.

Military sources said the Communists' supplies are low because of the monsoon mud, and they have put up little resistance to the new offensive. But they reported some North Vietnamese units have been observed moving south toward the plain.

The Pathet Lao radio claimed Tuesday that Thai troops supported by intensive American bombing were participating in the operation. A U.S. Embassy spokesman said there has been no increase in American air strikes in northern Laos.

Military sources in Vientiane suggested one purpose of the operation is to relieve pressure on Bouam Long, a CIA-supported government outpost just north of the Plain of Jars that has been under virtual siege for several months.

The Laotian government has imposed a news blackout on the operation. It was launched shortly after Prince Souvanna Phouma's government agreed to hold peace talks with the Pathet Lao on the Plain of Jars.

In Saigon, meanwhile, U.S. sources speculated that the lull in the war might be due to a desire on the part of the enemy to do nothing that would slow the American withdrawal.

Monsoon rains in the southern half of the country, and Typhoon Harriet in the north also helped cut down military activity.

Police Report

Three juveniles are in the custody of Pettis County juvenile authorities in connection with the theft June 26 of three mini-motorbikes from Yeager's Cycle Sales and Service, 123 East 16th.

Sources at the Sedalia police department said Wednesday the three youths were taken into custody by police about 5 p.m. Tuesday.

All of the motorbikes reported missing by James Yeager, 2308 South Kentucky, owner of the business, have been recovered.

Apparently no charges have been filed yet in the case.

Daniel R. Howard, 639 East 16th, reported to police at 6:05 p.m. Sunday that a man approached him to buy his 1950 Chevrolet panel truck; drove off in the vehicle and never returned.

Jim Yeager, owner of Yeager's Cycle Sales and Service, 123 East 16th, reported to police that someone took a 1971 mini-bike from the shop sometime Tuesday afternoon.

Sedalia police officer Tom Wasson found the mini-bike at 32nd and Kentucky late Tuesday afternoon.

Due to the critical shortage of blood, prospective donors are asked to call 826-5300 for an appointment.

Migration Proposal Advanced

WASHINGTON (AP) — A multi-billion-dollar program to reverse migration of America's rural poor to big-city slums was proposed today by eight senators.

"This legislation will underwrite with financial muscle the right of every American to have a free choice of where he shall live and make a living," Democratic Sens. Herman E. Talmadge of Georgia and Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota said in a joint statement.

The measure would authorize appropriations averaging $200 million annually for 10 years to provide loans and up to $300 million a year for subsidy grants.

Talmadge, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said the money would create jobs and raise family incomes by enabling small towns and rural areas to build industries and improve community facilities.

Rural America, he said, has been subsidizing for many years the crazy-quilt growth of cities and providing them with the best food bargains in the world.

"What we are doing today," he added, "represents an effort to start a new process by which some of that investment can be returned to rural America, not only for its benefit, but for the cities which have grown too large."

The House Agriculture Committee has opened hearings on the problem.

The bill defines a rural area as one outside a city of 35,000 or more population.

Commission Okays County Evaluations

The Missouri State Tax Commission has approved the Pettis County real and tangible property valuation submitted to it earlier this year by the County Clerk's office, according to Jim Green, presiding judge of the Pettis County Court.

According to the report received by the clerk's office, all figures sent to the commission were accepted by it without any increases or decreases in valuation.

Figures accepted by the commission are as follows: lands, $17,035,500; town lots, $28,357,150; horses, mares and geldings, $17,910; cattle, $1,732,040; hogs, $275,310; sheep, $4,630; poultry, $1,210; farm and other machinery, $939,390; household property, $2,113,690; all other tangible property, $8,038,679; and utilities, railroads and pipeline rights-of-way, $695,250.

The total real property valuation was set at $45,392,650 and total tangible property was established at $13,818,109.

Three Sedalia Youths Held By Authorities

(Democrat-Capital Service)

WARSAW — Three Sedalia youths will be charged with stealing fowl at night, a felony in Missouri, in connection with the attempted theft of four turkeys near Cole Camp Monday evening.

The three are Walter Ditton, address unknown; Toby Mittenburg, 316 West 16th; and Norman Frederick, 704 North Grand.

According to Richard Guymon, chief deputy of the Benton County Sheriff's department, the three have been charged with attempting to take the turkeys from the Elden Ehlers farm on Route 2, Cole Camp. Ehlers said the attempted theft took place about 10 p.m. Monday, and that he shot at the thieves with a shotgun.

Mittenburg, who gave his name to Sedalia Police as Byran Mittenburg, and to Bothwell Hospital employes as Brian Mittenburg was treated at the hospital Tuesday for pellet wounds.

He told Sedalia Police that he had been shooting fireworks between Stover and Cole Camp about 1 a.m. Tuesday, when he had been shot from behind by an unknown assailant.

If convicted of the charges, the youths could receive up to a $1,000 fine, up to one year in the county jail, or 2 to 10 years in prison.

In-Health Services Key Topic Of SFCC Trustees

State Fair Community College's in-health service program was one of the key topics of discussion during a meeting of the SFCC board of trustees Tuesday night.

Mrs. Amy Young, coordinator of the program, presented the board with a list of courses and training programs provided by the college at Bothwell Hospital, area rest homes and on the SFCC campus.

Students in the program are taught the uses of new equipment at the hospital as well as the medical terminology associated with the equipment, Mrs. Young said.

She also discussed the proposals for in-health service programs and classes for the coming year, explaining that several pilot programs could be offered by the college during the next academic year.

Dr. Marvin Fielding, dean of vocational technical education, explained that three-fourths of Mrs. Young's salary is paid by federal funds. Bothwell Hospital paid $2,000 of the salary last year and a small fee per student was also charged.

According to Dr. Fielding, the total cost to the taxpayers for last year's in-health service programs was $225. The program will be self-supporting this coming year, he added.

Concerning the food commodity program, William Hopkins, president of the board of trustees, explained the work Linda Reed, a home economist, is doing for the college.

Hopkins read three case histories prepared by Miss Reed, explaining that the program is definitely a success and added that it involves over 200 families and more than 600 individuals.

Action taken by the board Tuesday night consisted of the approval of hiring two instructors and a small structural change and new wiring for the college.

William E. Dey will be employed as an instructor in investments on a part-time basis for the fall semester. Dey has a B.S. degree in electrical engineering from The University of Missouri-Rolla and a Masters degree in business administration from the University of Missouri-St Louis.

Hired on a full-time basis was Mrs. Shirley J. Evans, who will teach secretarial science. Mrs. Evans formerly taught at Smithton and Knob Noster high schools.

William Rabourn, director of business, presented the board with proposals to add a display type closet to one of the classrooms and to change the present lead-in wiring at the college.

Rabourn pointed out that 50 per cent of the cost for the structural changes will be borne by the federal government and the wiring expense will amount to about $300.

Fred Davis, college president, said the present wiring system has caught on fire on different occasions and that the lead-in wire is not heavy enough to carry the current needed to service the college.

Davis also announced that the college has received a grant totaling $7,335 from the federal government for library services. The money will be used to purchase books and obtain various audio-visual aids.

It was announced that Dr. Steve Poort, who is presently on his way back to Missouri following a month of study at Florida, was instrumental in obtaining the grant.

Poort, dean of academic affairs, recently received a $1,000 grant from the Kellogg foundation to study tactics of employing and retaining instructors at the junior college level.

Dr. Joyce Fielding, director of admissions and student personnel, announced that credit in some cases can now be obtained for students over 16 enrolled in vocational courses at the college.

The board also made public a letter from Arthur Mallory, Commissioner of Education, containing the approval of SFCC's accreditation and tuition and maintenance charges. "It's actually a renewal of accreditation," Dr. Joyce Fielding pointed out.

It was also announced that the State Nursing Board has approved a request from SFCC to raise the number of students that can enroll in the licensed practical nursing program. Formerly, only 18 could enroll in that program, but the level has been raised to 24.

"It will make us a lot more flexible," Davis said, explaining the need for an increased amount of students in the program.

Payment routine bills for the month of May amounting to a total of $86,451.41 were approved as were $61,128.3 worth of bills incurred during the month of June.

At the close of the meeting Hopkins announced that ground breaking ceremonies for the new vocational-technical automotive building will be held in two weeks.

Nixon

reassure them are opinion leaders, editors, television, radio commentators, teachers, even perhaps presidents and politicians.

"Don't let the problems of the moment obscure the great and good things that are going on in this country ... I would suggest to the editors and other opinion makers here: that from time to time, maybe once a month, that message might come through."

Nixon restated his pledge to end the "era of permissiveness" by supporting additional law enforcement. He also said he had confidence in the young people of the nation to continue to support the fundamental beliefs of this country.

Preceding the talk by Nixon, news media members were given presentations by Clark MacGregor, the President's congressional liaison representative; Herbert Klein, presidential communications director; Donald Rumsfeld, executive assistant for domestic programs; Herbert Stein, a presidential economic adviser; William Ruckelshaus, chairman of the Environmental Protection Agency, and HEW Secretary Richardson.

Ruckelshaus reviewed the various environmental programs including Army Corps of Engineers projects and new water pollution regulations. Rumsfeld concentrated on the drug abuse programs which have been recently set up. In response to a question on hiring servicemen, Rumsfeld said that only 2 to 3 per cent of returning veterans have been found to be drug addicts, and that persons in the U.S. are as likely to be exposed to drugs as servicemen.

When asked about Rep. Wilbur Mills' version of welfare reform, MacGregor said that the administration has not seen Mills' proposal, but that if the changes improved the original program the administration would support them.

In an informal reception following the talks, newsmen talked candidly with Cabinet members and advisors. During the discussion, it was learned that the administration plans to continue work on ABM Safeguard sites until definite agreements can be reached at the SALT talks in Helsinki, Finland.

One White House source also stated that the administration would continue to force school districts to comply with civil rights legislation by withholding or freezing federal funds.

Following the reception, the Nixons and the White House Press Corps left for San Clemente, where Nixon is to review foreign policy in general and Vietnam in particular.

Amendment Practiced By Voters

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Local elections in at least five Missouri communities Tuesday gave the new 26th amendment one of its first workouts anywhere in the country.

In Cameron, Mo., 75 voters age 18, 19 and 20 turned out to cast ballots on an issue that almost lost its significance compared with the impact of the young people getting their first say at the polls.

Cameron defeated a liquor-by-the-drink proposal 725 to 575.

Steve Griffin and Jennifer Davis, both 18, camped out for several days to be among the first in the nation to cast a ballot under provisions of the amendment. It went into effect on Monday.

The story was a little different in Memphis, Mo. Lu Ann Monroe celebrated her 18th birthday by voting on a $412,000 bond issue to improve the community's electric light system. She was the only 18-year-old to vote. Only four others, 19 and 20, took advantage of the lower voting age. The bonds were approved, 187 to 69.

In Craig, Mo., Stephen Ohlensehlen became the first 18-year-old to vote, casting his ballot on a water bond issue.

Scott Deatherage, alsq 18, was on hand at 7 a.m. in Eureka, Mo., to vote on a liquor-by-the drink referendum.

At Owensville, Beth Binkelu and Bic Schaefferkoetter were the first 18-year-old voters in a special annexation election.

Texas Girl Dies In Jasper Crash

JASPER, Mo. (AP) — A 6-year-old Houston, Tex., girl was killed Tuesday when a car driven by her mother ran off a county road three miles north of Jasper in southwest Missouri.

Dead is Ann Kendall. Her mother, Mrs. Barbara Kendall, 32, was hospitalized at Lamar.

As Probation Agent

Former Prisoner To Work

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — A Nevada man, told 13 years ago he had no hope for parole from a second-degree murder conviction, begins work here today as probation agent for Montgomery County.

The series of events which led to parole for Tom Eisentrager began last summer when Montgomery County Judge Plummer Shearin and other jurists spent a few days in the Nevada State Prison under the guise of prisoners.

Shearin, in Nevada for a conference on prison reform, said he and other judges became acquainted with Eisentrager. Shearin said the 48-year-old prisoner "was highly regarded by both fellow inmates and jail officials."

Returning to Maryland, Judge Shearin decided to press for the inmate's parole. In April he enlisted the services of Dr. Brian Crowley, a Bethesda psychiatrist.

The two Marylanders went to Nevada and pleaded Eisentrager's case before Gov. Michael O'Callahan and the state parole board.

The board, which unanimously rejected a parole request last year, voted 4 to 2 last Friday to release Eisentrager into the custody of Maryland officials. He arrived in Maryland Saturday.

Eisentrager, still stunned about his release, said he wants to "try to keep kids from getting in their first prison situation.

"All I want right now . . . is to feel I am doing something positive. I can look back at the whole mess of garbage in the past and have to strain to find anything positive.

"To become a real person, you must have a moral standard, which I never had until now."

Eisentrager received a life sentence in 1958 for second-degree murder in the slaying of his girl friend.

Since it was his fourth major conviction, Nevada state law dictated the specification "no hope of parole" be attached to his sentence.

Crowley attributed factors leading to Eisentrager's parole, despite stipulation on his sentence, to "an enormous human change in his individual make-up."

Eisentrager, the product of a broken home, said his transformation began in prison when he read "a lot of philosophy" and "started trying to get my head straight."

Couple Is Killed In MoPac Crash

OSAWATOMIE, Kan. (AP) — A Missouri Pacific freight train collided with a pickup truck Tuesday afternoon at an intersection southwest of here, killing Mr. and Mrs. William E. Jackson of Osawatomie.

The accident was on a county road that is not marked by warning lights, according to the Miami County Sheriff's office.

The office said Jackson, 43, was dead at the scene, and Mrs. Roberta Jackson, 39, was pronounced dead on arrival at a hospital at Paola, Kan.

Thieves at Work

The statue of Venus, left, and another 17th century copy of a Greek original were decapitated by art thieves last week in the latest of a series of art thefts in Rome parks. These statues, and two others which were also vandalized, are victims of black market trading, selling for an estimated $5,000 each. (UPI)

Cabbie Keeps On Whaling

DENVER (AP) — Jack Kaufman stopped his cab at an intersection and tilted his yellow beret at a jaunty angle. Before the light changed he dragged his trumpet from under the seat and ripped off a chorus of "When the Saints Go Marching In."

"I probably get more requests for that than any other," he said. "They think I'm a screwball. The other drivers do, too. But it pays, man. The fares scale tip you good. You can turn on to a lot of groovy chicks, too."

Kaufman, who learned the oboe as a teen-ager but can't read trumpet arrangements, figures he has a repertoire of more than 1,000 songs.

"I don't do it in the daytime, because I have to watch out for the fuss. They'll bust you . . ."

"They busted me one time for playing near the City Park Zoo at 2 or 3 a.m. There was nobody around, but they said I was disturbing the elephants."

Kaufman, 36, is unmarried—"No way, man, in this town, where the chicks outnumber the guys like 5 to 1.

"I've hauled guys around town four or five hours. Once five members of the Oakland Raiders had me haul them around that long, just sightseeing and listening to me play. Football players are generally good fares. They scale good."

Generally, Kaufman, says he'll see if a farer is in a good mood. Then, he'll ask him what he wants to hear, or he'll ask him his home state. That's the opening for school fight songs, state songs or other tunes.

Complaints?

"Yeah, a couple. Once a lady at a telephone company got into the cab with a bunch of other gals from the company, on their way home. She complained about the route I was taking, and about the horn. When she got out, I played 'The Funeral March.'

"That's when she called the boss."

Kaufman, a Canadaigua, N.Y., native, operated a music store and promoted records from 1957 to 1968, but he's never regretted driving a cab.

"A chick told me one time I stopped her from committing suicide by cheering her up," he said.

"I don't play real good. I don't play good at all. But early in the morning, when some guys come out of a music joint and have had a few, I sound pretty good. They think I'm Harry James."

Four-Day Week By Memphis Police

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The Memphis Police Department has added a new weapon to its crime-fighting arsenal—the four-day work week.

The plan, scheduled to start July 12, will enable the department to put more patrolmen on the streets during peak crime hours, said Police Chief Henry Lux.

Three ten-hour shifts will be squeezed into a 24-hour clock, said Lux, and the required overlapping will double the number of policemen on the streets during the period of highest crime concentration—between 6 p.m. and midnight.

Red Coats Back At Patrol Jobs

BOSTON (AP) — The red coats are back in Boston, this time by invitation to patrol the aisles of a supermarket looking for shop lifters and pocketbook snatchers.

Six boys, aged 12 to 18, and dressed in red jackets police the store, and store officials say the result has been a 90 per cent crop in shoplifting and handbag snatching.

"The kids' rapport and nononsense attitude toward others the same age have made the difference," said manager Larry McCarthy. "We've saved hundreds of dollars a week in merchandise formerly damaged or stolen."

Roundtrip Air Fares Plan Decision Near

MONTREAL (AP) — A roundtrip fare of about $200 for transatlantic flights paid for 90 to 120 days in advance is reported close to approval by the world's international airlines.

The proposal, under discussion by the 40 lines attending the North Atlantic fares conference of the International Air Transport Association, is aimed at winning back the business being lost to low-fare charter lines.

"There is a general feeling of acceptance of a fare in the plus or minus $200 range," said an IATA spokesman Monday night. "However, there are a number of different views as to what form that fare should take."

Except for the $200 youth fares recently put in by a number of major lines, the cheapest New York-to-London roundtrip fare now is $272 in the slack winter season. Pan American, TWA, BOAC and Air Canada are urging the lower advance-pay rate and have threatened to quit IATA unless the other lines agree.

IATA is a rate-fixing organization formed to prevent fare wars that would drive some lines out of business. The charter airlines are not members. Unanimity is required for approval of fare changes.

The conference opened June 29 and is expected to last about a month.

Question Spot Reducing Plans

By PETER WEAVER

Q — I am enclosing an advertisement on thigh-slimmer belts. Do these devices really work? — Mrs. J. R. K., Pleasant Garden, N. Y.

A — Spot reducing devices are sold in all sorts of forms — rubber belts, inflatable girdles and thigh pads. Advertisers claim they can do such things as help "reduce waist" or "lose 10 pounds in 10 days."

With some devices you're supposed to follow a special plan which involves dieting and simple exercise. One "simple" exercise plan (not revealed in the ad) requires 50 "squat to bench" semi-kneebend movements with back straight plus 50 side leg raises and 200 toe touches. This takes around 20 minutes and must be done every day.

According to an American Medical Assn., review of spot-reducing advertising claims: "Globules of fat are inside the cells . . . the idea that mechanical pressure could cause them to vanish or to move to other places in the body is ridiculous . . . Equally ridiculous is the idea that sweating (the production of a watery secretion by the sweat glands) can get rid of fat (which is chemically and physically different from water)."

It's true that proper diet and exercise will tone your body, possibly improve your posture and otherwise make you look and feel better. Reporting in the Annals of Internal Medicine, three California doctors say that, while exercise does reduce the total quantity of fat in the body, test evidence disputes the concept of spot-weight reduction.

The doctors concluded their report by quoting Shakespeare's Hamlet: "There is a divinity that shapes our ends."

Q — We are moving to Puerto Rico and I wonder if you have any information on how we should handle the packing and moving of some valuable antiques. — Mrs. A. W. D., Milford, Del.

A — Get in touch with the director of the nearest art museum or gallery. Ask what moving company they use when they have exhibits which are not handled by the museum or art gallery itself.

For example, the Phillips Art Gallery, Washington, D. C., says 80 Cezanne paintings were recently shipped for exhibition around the United States and Latin America. A New York moving company delivered the paintings to each city with nary a scratch or bruise. Naturally, you pay extra for this kind of special packing and handling.

Q — When you leave a box of soap powder open, does it lose its strength? — Mrs. J.D.F., Avondale, Pa.

A — Soap powder does not lose its cleaning power when it's left open. Soap is "hydroscopic," which means it will pick up water from the air. This may cake it but won t affect its power to clean your wash.

Q — I am an old-time movie buff but must confess that I find fewer and fewer movies I care to see. Some statistician recently said there were 40 million middle-age or retired women in the country. Many would like to see a movie and perhaps have dinner downtown.

But the language, nudity, sex and violence in many movies these days turns us off. Must we just give up? — Mrs. M. B., Camden, N.J.

A — Don't give up. The American Film Institute (Washington, D.C.) suggests you might find enough kindred souls to form a movie club. For program source material, the institute recommends the book "Feature Films on 8 and 16 MM" (James M. Limbacher, Educational Film Library Association, New York City).

You can get this book, borrow films and rent projectors in many public libraries. Movies can also be rented from nontheatrical film agencies (phone book yellow pages).

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Children Should Know About the Family Life

Dr. Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have been married twice and have two children. I lost my first husband and my daughter is from that marriage. I now have a little boy from my second marriage. My little girl is 4½ years old and my first husband's parents often come to see her. She is too little to understand what really happened to her daddy but her grandparents seem to want to tell her things about him and she is a very mixed-up little girl. I have asked them not to say anything to her but it seems that they don't care to keep quiet. What can I do?

Dear Reader — The simplest thing in most complex situations is just to tell the truth. I think you have to be honest with children and this begins from the time they are old enough for you to have any verbal communication with them at all. Eventually, they will find out the truth and usually this is not as great a shock as finding out that they have been deceived by their loved ones.

I don't mean that it is necessary to go into traumatic details, but I think all questions should be answered as simply and directly as possible. Your problem reminds me of what sometimes happens to adopted children. They do very well when they are told from birth that they are adopted; but if they are not and learn the truth later in life, they often have a very severe emotional shock. I presume that your little girl does know that her real father is dead and, certainly, it is better that she understands this early in life.

Children are often much stronger than their parents realize. I believe that if you follow the course of just being truthful and honest there really shouldn't be any problem about what the child's grandparents tell her.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am a 40-year-old woman with a weight problem. Can I reduce safely by consuming liquids only — such as juices and broth? I take one high-potency vitamin tablet daily and one organic iron tablet with vitamin B-12 three times a day. It is much easier for me to lose weight this way than it is by eating foods. I always end up with too many calories.

Dear Reader — You probably can lose weight that way, depending on what is in your juice and broth. I don't recommend it particularly, unless you are under a physician's care. Any weight you lose will probably come right back after you resume your usual eating habits. Clearly, you can't live on juice and broth forever. The key to weight control, as opposed to lose a little — gain a little, is a basic change in living habits. This includes what you eat and how much physical activity you do. Why don't you just cut out the fat, the sugar and the bread and walk a mile each day? Then see where you are in about three months.

City Has Objection To Action

By NICK LUDINGTON
Associated Press Writer

AFYONKARAHISAR, Turkey (AP) — In English this town's name means "the black castle of opium."

"If nothing else think of the indignity," said a shopkeeper. "Now we'll be called 'the black castle of alfalfa' or the 'black castle of beets.' "

He referred to the Turkish government's decision to ban opium poppies, a traditional crop in this area of west Turkey for more than 400 years. Alfalfa and sugar beets have been suggested as substitutes.

The government has promised to compensate farmers for their income from opium poppies and to help them find substitute income.

The United States has agreed to help pay this compensation and give technical aid for new crops and jobs for an estimated 50,000 farmers whose livelihood, or part of it, will be wiped out by the ban, effective next year.

American officials estimate that 80 per cent of the heroin reaching U.S. addicts originates in Turkish poppy fields.

The ban is a shock to farmers here.

They point out that the poppy produces more than raw opium gum. Its seeds are crushed for a high-grade vegetable oil used in cooking. The crushed residue makes a nourishing supplement to animal feed.

There is no addiction problem in Turkey, but many opium-farm families keep a little of the raw opium back each year as a home remedy for colds and as a mild sedative for children.

"They ban opium, they cut off our hands and feet," said Adem Kock, a farmer in the village of Fethiyekoy.

Turkish newspaper comments generally back the government's decision. Columnists say it was necessary to avoid accusations that Turkey is contributing the growing international drug menace, and note that the United States is repaying Turkey for money it has made annually from legal opium exports for medicinal purposes.

But they doubt the ban will solve America's problem.

"Those who are degenerating America's youth, its poeple, even its soldiers will continue running around loose," wrote a resident of the neighboring province of Usak in the daily Aksam.

"But the poor opium farmer of Usak, blamed for a crime he never dreamed of, is deprived of his traditional income."

'Satchmo' Had No Equal

By EDDIE ADAMS
Associated Press Photographer

The world lost a friend today.

His name was Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong.

His friends called him "Pops." He in turn called them "Pops."

I first met him a little over a year ago at a New York recording studio.

He's such a giant of the music world that it was a bit surprising to discover that he was really short—a little under 5 foot 6.

There was about him that warm quality, an easy smile that made you relax in his presence.

He wasn't playing his horn when I first saw him, but was singing with that gravel voice, "We Shall Overcome." When the recording session was over I met his cheerful wife Lucille, who travels with him.

Pops' birthday was coming up on July 4. He would be 70. This became an opportunity for me to make more pictures of a man I admired.

Ira Mangel, Pops' long-time friend and personal manager, accompanied me to his unpretentious home in Queens. He was a zany sight as he entered his room—he was wearing Bermuda shorts and a Mets baseball cap.

The next time we met it was in Las Vegas.

In his small dressing room at the International, bouquets of flowers scattered throughout made the room even smaller. There were only three people with Pops.

He picked up his horn, played a couple of notes, gently laid the shiny instrument on his lap and stared at it as though he was either spellbound or reminiscing. He looked frightened.

This was a big night for Pops. It was be his first public appearance playing his horn after a two-year absence because of illness. Death had rubbed shoulders with Pops twice during that time.

But this was his night, Sept. 6, 1970.

Wearing a bright smile, holding his horn in one hand, Pops came bursting out of the dressing room door—stopped abruptly—stretched out both arms and chuckled devilishly:

"My debut."

Pops went on to play to a standing ovation.

Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong had returned.

The doctors said he wouldn't play again.

He said he would.

He did.

Friends packed his dressing room after the performance and he was happy.

"Satchmo"

I didn't see Pops again until he opened at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York March 1.

I waited offstage for him. He wasn't the same Satchmo I had seen in September. Now he was frail. He moved slowly, haltingly. Six months had made a very old man of Pops. He weighed 125 pounds. He needed help to climb three steps to the stage.

That night, Pops ended his performance with a song about his life, "The Little Boy from New Orleans." I think he was trying to tell us something.

After a standing ovation, Pops, Ira and I started for his suite, but through the lobby of the hotel a crowd of well-wishers and autograph seekers surrounded Pops. He obliged. A New York columnist latched on to Ira. The crowd disappeared. Pops disappeared.

At the far end of the lobby the light was reflected from his horn. It made me look up. I saw Pops walking away alone. He seemed in a daze, swaying as he walked.

"He had tears in his eyes as he walked off the stage during his last night at the Waldorf," said Ira.

"In all my years with him, I have never seen him cry before. He played his horn like he never played before."

That last night at the Waldorf when Pops walked off the stage, no one but Pops knew. He would never play publicly again.

Treasurer Fails In Account Try

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — State Treasurer Walter Peery failed to get the Kansas Board of Examiners to reconsider the awarding of local accounts of some state agencies to banks.

Peery contends the accounts were awarded out of normal rotation and this was based on politics and favoritism.

The board awarded the fee agency accounts on June 24.

Peery, a Republican, is secretary to the board but is not a member and has no vote.

Board members are State Auditor Clay Hedrick, also a Republican, Robert F. Brandt, director of the State Department of Administration, and Carl O'Leary, both appointees of Democratic Gov. Robert Docking.

When Peery tried to get the awards reopened at their meeting Tuesday, Hedrick moved the board adjourn.

Brandt said the law does not prescribe any order of rotation and Perry has no formal standing to put matters on the agenda for the board.

Plans Retirement From Truman Library

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — A 36-year veteran of the National Archives and Records Service, who came here in 1957 to oversee construction of the Truman Library and stayed as its director, announced his retirement Tuesday.

Dr. Philips C. Brooks Sr., was named library director when the facility was dedicated in July of 1957. He was the succeeded by Dr. Benedict K. Zobrist, assistant director. The change is effective Sept. 30.

Dr. Brooks joined the national archives in Washington in 1935 and remained there until 1953, when he became director of the Federal Records Center in San Francisco.

Petitions Presented For Bridge

AMES, Iowa (AP) — The Iowa Highway Commission has been presented with petitions bearing nearly 3,000 signatures asking for a pedestrian-bicycle bridge over the Missouri River between Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Omaha, Neb.

The petitions were presented Tuesday by Dennis Butler, Council Bluffs school teacher who is president of the Council Bluffs Bicycle Club. He said similar petitions would be presented to the Nebraska Highway Commission.

Many pedestrians and bicylists, Butler told the commission, are using the Interstate 480 bridge between the two cities, causing a traffic hazard.

The commission took no action on the request but promised to study the matter, including the possibility of getting federal money for such a crossing.

The request for a foot and bicycle span between the two cities was first made in 1964 and was renewed in 1966 when the commission said it didn't intend to include such a structure in its interstate bridge plans.

The old Ak-Sar-Ben bridge, which was demolished in 1968, provided such a walkway across the river.

But Council Bluffs and Omaha turned down an offer from the two states to take over the bridge. The cities said it would be too expensive to maintain the ancient structure, originally built as a wagon bridge in 1888.

President Urged To Fight Hunger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty senators, declaring millions of children may go hungry this summer, have urged the Nixon administration to release immediately millions of dollars they say were promised for a nationwide child-feeding program.

In a joint letter to George Shultz, director of the Office of Management and Budget, the senators complained the Department of Agriculture encouraged localities to expand their programs, then said it couldn't support requests for new funds.

The Agriculture Department announced earlier this week $18.1 million will be available for the program this summer, an amount the senators said is $15 million less than required, though they acknowledged it's three times as much as was allocated last year.

"We are concerned that millions of children in New York and Newark, in San Antonio and Los Angeles, in Minneapolis and Indianapolis, and in many other cities throughout the nation will not be fed this summer as promised," the senators said.

They said expansion of the summer feeding program this year "is a direct result of Department of Agriculture promotion . . .

"Our cities were urged to expand their efforts and were assured the necessary money would be forthcoming," they said.

The 40 senators reminded the administration Congress specifically authorized the secretary of agriculture to spend up to $100 million on this year's summer programs, in addition to whatever funds might be included in the department's regular authorization bill.

The department acknowledged getting requests for $26.6 million as of June 18, the senators said, but "a more recent survey conducted by the League of Cities-U.S. Conference of Mayors revealed that summer requests actually total $33 million."

Sen. Clifford Case, R-N.J., said in a statement his state alone needs $1.5 million to feed 100,000 children this summer.

"Under the department's allocation we will receive only $320,000," Case said.

Case Load For Court Increases

The Pettis County Circuit Court has managed to sustain and at times exceed the pace it set in previous years for disposition of civil and criminal cases, according to Judge Frank Meyer.

In the court's last fiscal year, which ended June 15, Judge Meyer said that 35 more civil cases were disposed of than during the previous year. In spite of the growing number of criminal cases heard, the court has managed to keep up with them also, Meyer said.

Out of 804 civil cases on the court's schedule during the fiscal year, 61 per cent were disposed of, contrasted to 830 cases in the previous year, of which 57 per cent were heard.

One area of civil law which continues to explode, as far as total court commitment goes, is the mounting level of divorce cases. In the 1969-70 court year, there were 222 such cases. By the conclusion of the 1970-71 court year, that number had climbed to 235.

Criminal cases are also taking up a greater amount of court time. By the end of the 1970-71 court year, the number of these cases had risen by 24 per cent over the previous year. There were 78 criminal cases on the court schedule in 1969-70 and 103 cases for the year ending June 15, Judge Meyer said.

Also increasing were the number of juvenile cases. They showed a 9 per cent rise, with 132 cases this last court year compared to 120 the previous year.

The figures released by Meyer were in connection with an annual report made to the Judicial Conference of Missouri.

Astronomers explain that the summer solstice—June 21—is the point the sun reaches at its farthest day-to-day migration northward when watched from earth.

New Program in Missouri

Prisoners Receive College Training

EDITORS: This is the first of two stories on a new college training program at Missouri's Algoa Intermediate Reformatory near Jefferson City.

By JANE ERICKSON
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A new approach to rehabilitation of prisoners is taking place in Missouri. College is going to prison.

There are 150 inmates taking college-level courses once or twice a week at the main prison for men at Jefferson City, Algoa Intermediate Reformatory, Missouri Training Center for Men at Moberly and the Prison for Women at Tipton. It is possible for prisoners to receive the equivalent of a full college year's credits in two years through the new program — and some have.

This fall, a pilot program will be tried. Seven convicts will enroll at the University of Missouri — Rolla — still prisoners of the State since their sentences are not complete — but working toward a degree to better equip them for the day when they return to society.

All this began three years ago when a young professor of Economics from the University of Missouri - Rolla saw the repeated return of men to prison as wasted manpower and a gross waste of tax dollars.

"Crime is a dollar and cents issue — an economic issue," said Dr. David Hentzel who initiated the program on his own time and money.

Hentzel said the program could be the beginning of a change in the correctional system of Missouri if successful — and it looks good so far. He said he got the idea while working on his Doctorate at Southern Illinois University, Carbondale.

"I saw this program work," he said. "When I was working on my Doctorate, I taught in the Illinois program at Menard Prison" at Chester, Illinois.

Although he has no training in correctional work, Hentzel has a burning conviction there is a better way to rehabilitate prisoners than is being used. He brought the Illinois approach here as one part of solving the problem.

"You cannot turn a man loose with $25, a one-way bus ticket, a suit of clothes and nothing to do and expect him to make it outside," he said. He favors work release programs, or work furloughs as they are sometimes called, education and rechannelling manpower into useful ways.

Hentzel rankles at the waste of present correctional life. He calls man "our most precious and fragile commodity" and feels concern at wasted brains and muscles in correctional institutions. Making license plates is not the answer, he said.

Hentzel started the college program on his own time travelling two evenings a week to Algoa.

"The is the Show-Me State," he grinned, "and I had to show 'em it would work."

Finally, in 1969, the program was adopted and federal funds were procured through the Missouri Law Enforcement Association to help. Uncle Sam furnishes 60 per cent of the money — Missouri 40 per cent.

Right now there are two classes a week at Algoa; three at Moberly; six at the main prison here and one at Tipton.

"There are several ex-convicts in universities today — some that had no college before coming to prison, some that picked up both high school and college hours inside the walls," Hentzel said.

Hentzel seems to have a soft spot for the reformatory which confines only young men ages 18 to 25 convicted of relatively minor crimes.

Missouri's Algoa Intermediate Reformatory, according to Superintendent Ray French, is unique. He said Missouri is the only State in the Union with an intermediate reformatory. Others, he said, house this group of short-termers with hardened criminals.

French is a former educator who is greatly interested in education for the inmate. He said the teaching staff at the reformatory has grown from "a couple of teachers" when he arrived at Algoa 13 years ago to 20 today.

Algoa offers education for its 450 population from the first grade through high school.

The influx of drug-oriented crimes, French said, has made offering college courses feasible. He said inmates were there for two reasons, "stealing and lying," but thefts to supply drug addiction have brought a more educated youth to Algoa.

Travel Films Remain Intriguing For Many

By GENE HANDSAKER
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Travel photos, which probably date back to the first box camera, usually are more interesting to the fellow who took them than to his friends. But in 1929 a frustrated actor named James A. FitzPatrick began producing them entertainingly for a mass movie market.

In 31 years, FitzPatrick ground out more than 300 travelogues, ending his narration of each with a line that became a cliche: "As the sun sinks slowly in the golden west, we reluctantly say farewell to Bombay, the gateway to India"—or "Tibet, land of isolation" or wherever he happened to be.

The format FitzPatrick fathered survives today in three widely syndicated weekly television shows—

—"Three Passports to Adventure," starring as narrators and principals the handsome Linker family: Hal, his Icelandic-born wife Halla and their son David, who estimate they've traveled nearly a million miles to 133 countries.

—The syndicated "Animals, Action and Adventure" and CBS Sunday show, "Animal World," of Bill Burrud, 45, a hearty, one-time child movie actor who now stresses animals in a bid for the younger audience.

—"Passport to Travel," produced and narrated by Hal Sawyer, onetime TV announcer. Traveling, he estimates, 100,000 miles a year with his camera, he also conducts tours and operates a Hollywood travel agency.

Knowledgeable sources say these shows, except for a few local programs and such costlier, less frequent specials as Capt. Jacques Cousteau's undersea explorations, NBC's "Wild Kingdom" and CBS' National Geographic studies, are the current big three in the travel-adventure field.

Traveloguers are a tireless breed who face freezing, sunstroke, drowning, tarantulas, lions and elephants to bring exotic thrills to armchair adventurers. They found their calling for a variety of reasons. FitzPatrick turned to producing when he got nowhere as an actor. Burrud, recalling his childhood exploits in movies, saw travel movies as a means to get back in front of a camera. Linker was a travel lecturer for whom TV was a natural progression.

Linker, a 50-ish native of New York City, trained for the diplomatic service, discovered a public-speaking gift in college and served as a Navy intelligence and briefing officer at Iwo Jima and Okinawa.

"It seemed natural after the war to become a travel lecturer," he says. His earlier inspiration had been the late Burton Holmes, who toured with hand-colored slides and later movies for 10 years to town halls and geographic societies.

Sallying forth every summer with his wife, son and three crates of camera gear, Hal has shot nearly 600,000 feet of film, which he edits in a studio at home.

The husky Burrud, a Hollywood native, acted in films between ages 8 and 14. After wartime Navy service and university graduation with a degree in business administration, he was a radio announcer-salesman in suburban Santa Ana.

"I had a love for travel and a desire to get on camera," he says, so he bought a used camera for $120, asked how to set the lens and made his first travel film in Santa Barbara. In 17 years since that series, "Open Road," Burrud has produced a raft of travel-adventure packages including "Wanderlust," "Vagabond," "True Adventure" and "The American West."

Sawyer, like Linker, 50-ish and born in New York City, was an officer on passenger ships before turning TV announcer for Eddie Cantor, Donald O'Connor and others. Back in the travel field with his own TV show, he globetrots with his camera because: "You can't tell people about Johannesburg based on a trip you made 15 years ago."

FitzPatrick, 69, a native of Shelton, Conn., says, "With sound pictures I saw an opportunity to bring the world to millions of people who might not get a chance to see it."

He estimates he has traveled the equivalent of 10 round trips to the moon by plane, ship, donkey and foot.

Clothesline Switch

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — A fashion conscious bather exchanged swimsuits at a backyard clothesline over the weekend, police reported.

Mrs. Richard Bradfield told authorities the two-piece swimsuit she had hung on her clothesline was missing. The thief replaced, it she said, only with the bottom half of another suit.

BUSINESS NEWS

BRAINERD, Minn. — Erwin O. Eckhoff, Cole Camp, was among approximately 120 district representatives of Lutheran Brotherhood, fraternal insurance society, attending a regional sales conference at Madden's Inn near Brainerd. Rckhoff is a Fraternal Insurance Counselor (FIC), and a member of the Lavern Mausolf agency, headquartered at Kansas City, Kan.

Employe Goes Ape Over Advertisement

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Tom Moyer, 14, put on a gorilla suit and climbed up to the marquee of the Paramount Theater to advertise the movie being shown.

He was sitting on the marquee when he slipped and found himself hanging from a light standard with his feet searching for toehold on the bottom of the marquee.

An anonymous telephone call brought five fire engines and rescue cars to the scene.

"We were under the impression somebody was going to jump" Fire Bureau Capt. Dale Palmer said.

Firemen put up a ladder and helped young Moyer down.

The movie? "Escape From the Planet of The Apes."

Plains Wind Damage Increases Reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wind damaged more than 2½ times more agricultural acreage in the 10 Great Plains states this year than was reported in the last erosion season.

But the 4.76-million acre total for the seven-month season ended May 31 was far under the 1954-55 record, when more than 15 million acres of crop and rangeland was damaged, according to Agriculture Department records.

Of this year's total, 94.2 per cent was crop, and most of the rest open range. Well over half the total erosion damage occurred in Texas, which reported 2.77 million wind-swept acres.

Winds destroyed crops or cover on 601,000 acres of land not damaged by erosion, 50 per cent more than was lost last season. Colorado, with 276,000 acres and Texas, 130,000 acres, accounted for two-thirds of the crop and cover loss.

The Southern Plains states reported most of the emergency tillage of 3.9 million acres to prevent damage, but land reported May 31 totaled nearly 7 million acres.

Major factors contributing to wind erosion this season were insufficient plant growth and residue, soil dryness, clean tilling of land for seedbed preparation and failure to perform needed emergency tillage.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Checks totaling $1.13 billion are in the mails this week to nearly 1.5 million wheat, feed-grain and cotton farms which have certified compliance with the government's land set-aside programs.

These preliminary payments are running about $600 million behind the pace of advances made by the corresponding date last year. The Agriculture Department attributes this to a very late spring which delayed planting, plus drought in some area which caused some farmers to delaying firming up their planting intentions.

The department explained that within the next two weeks most of the farmers participating in the 1971 programs will have received preliminary payments boosting the advances to $2.5 billion.

More than 2 million farms are enrolled in the set-aside system. Feed-grain producers ultimately will get about $1.1 billion this year, cotton growers around $800 million and wheat producers about the same amount.

Under the 1970 law, preliminary payments to wheat producers are limited to 75 per cent of final payments. Feed-grain and cotton farmers may or may not receive a final amount, depending on market conditions.

The department estimates this year's total payments for grain and cotton will be about $2.7 billion, some $600 million less than they received last year under a system that was replaced by the set-aside program.

Willed Funds For Clinic For Women

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Showman Earl Carroll, killed in 1948 in a plane crash, willed funds from his estate to establish a women's cancer clinic.

Plans for the Earl Carroll Research and Diagnostic Institute for Women have been approved in Superior Court. Trustees said it took 23 years to settle debts and taxes against the $1.3 million estate.

A songwriter and movie producer, Carroll operated a theater-restaurant in Hollywood and his show, "Vanities," was on Broadway for 13 years. About $350,000 will be spent to build the clinic in the San Fernando Valley.

United Nations Aid Is Helping Develop New Rivers System

SALONIKA, Greece (AP) — Nearly 2,300 years after Alexander the Great died in Babylon while planning a drainage and irrigation system for the plains of the river Euphrates, the United Nations is aiding a similar project to develop a river system that flows from Yugoslavia through Greece close by the birthplace of the former Macedonian king.

Alexander, a scientist as well as a military adventurer, was born in 356 B.C., less than 10 miles from where the Greek side of the project is planned.

Work began in June on the two nation multipurpose study of the hydro-electric potential, and irrigation and flood control projects on the river. Called the Vardar at its source in Yugoslavia and the Axios (worthy) in Greece, the river eventually drains into the Aegean Sea after its long meandering course.

The United Nations Development Program (UNDP) has allocated $1.14 million to the three-year scheme to prepare a master development plan which could lead to a water sharing agreement for the river. The Greek and Yugoslav governments together are making available the equivalent of $2.5 million to the project.

The Vardar finds its source not far from the southern Yugoslav city of Skopje and flood risk is found essentially in the Yugoslav portion of the basin. The UNDP already has assisted a flood control project to protect the city and its 28,000 inhabitants.

The flow of the river where it crosses the Greek-Yugoslav border varies from an extreme low of eight cubic meters per second in the dry season to a recorded torrential 4,200 cubic meters a second at the peak of the spring and autumn floods. The low discharge in the dry season causes severe problems for Greek agriculture particularly, and their minimum requirement at these times is 50 cubic meters a second.

The development plan prepared during the upcoming project will play an important part in the efforts to regulate and put to use the waters of the Vardar-Axios. Greece is heavily dependent on the plan to increase its agricultural output providing greater amounts of fresh produce for export.

Near this city in northern Greece, the nation's second largest major industrial center, project experts will also investigate ground-water resources as an alternative to surface water to meet future requirements. The city's population is expected to double to more than one million by the year 2000.

Over-all, the multipurpose scheme is expected to eventually benefit more than two million people in the immediate area.

Limited irrigation schemes already are under way or have been completed along the river. The UN-aided project aims for major new storage works to retain enough water to irrigate all arable lands on both sides of the river basin.

Plans for a reservoir containing up to one billion cubic meters of water already have been prepared and the new project calls for even larger reservoirs holding 2 to 2.5 billion cubic meters, half of the annual discharge of the river.

The importance of the Vardar-Axios project is underlined by the fact that the total foreseeable demand for water in Greece is estimated at 600 million cubic meters annually, and in Yugoslavia, at 1.7 billion cubic meters a year.

In Greece, irrigation has been shown to boost the average family earnings from small farms by two to three times.

The increase of supplies of water will provide a major impetus to agriculture in both countries, and particularly in Greece which is emphasizing the export of fruit and vegetable crops and animal husbandry.

The project will also investigate the hydro-electric potential of the river since the demand for power in Yugoslavia and Greece is expected to increase dramatically in the next 20 years.

Smithton Queen Candidates

Six girls will be vying for the crown of the Smithton Town and Country Fair Queen Friday evening. The contest, which is open to any girl 18 or over and who resides in the Smithton Town and Country Fair District, will be judged on the basis of personality, beauty and poise.

Judges for the event will include Miss Ann Bruckerhoff, 1970 Missouri State Fair Queen; Dr. Stephen Poort, dean of academic affairs, State Fair Community College; and Jerry N. Jones, Sedalia mayor.

Miss Janice Lucas, 19, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Coy Lucas, Florence. She is a 1971 graduate of Smithton High School and is a member of the Smithton Baptist Church. Miss Lucas enjoys working with children and plans to do social work.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Cook, Smithton, Julie Cook, 18, attends State Fair Community College. Miss Cook is majoring in biology and will be a sophomore this fall. She is presently employed at Sears.

Miss Karen Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert L. Moore, Route 2, is a 1969 graduate of Smithton High School and is a junior at Central Missouri State College majoring in social studies. She is a member of the Smithton Methodist Church.

A 1971 graduate of Smithton High School, Miss Glenda Lucas, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Coy Lucas, Florence, plans to attend Airline Personnel School to become a ticket agent. She is a member of the Smithton Baptist Church.

Miss Charlotte Davis, 19, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Davis, Smithton. She is a 1969 graduate of Smithton High School and is presently a junior at Central Missouri State College majoring in vocal music education.

Miss Stephenia Gieschen, 20, is a senior at the Conservatory of Music with the University of Missouri in Kansas City majoring in voice performance. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nolen Gieschen, Smithton, she is working as a summer counselor with "Upperbound" students in Kansas City.

Winner of the contest will represent Smithton in the Miss Missouri State Fair contest.

A "Little Miss 1971" will be selected by means of a drawing during the queen contest. "The "Little Miss" must be between 5 and 8 and may be nominated by anyone in the community.

Following the contest Friday evening, the Notables, a musical group from Sedalia, will present a concert. Chairmen for the contest are Mrs. Karl Kasak and Mrs. Lynn Wagenknecht.

Other events scheduled for the fair which runs Friday and Saturday include one-act plays, a flower show, art show and competition with needlecraft and baked goods, hobbies and handicrafts and 4-H exhibits. Contests for horseshoe pitching and tractors are planned and a chicken barbecue is the main event for Saturday evening.

Smithton fair chairmen report they are looking forward to a large crowd and encourage area persons to attend.

Ginger Snaps

By Ginger Moore

An opportunity to attend a presidential press conference is something nearly every reporter dreams of and this week I was fortunate to have just such an opportunity. Unfortunately it wasn't exactly what I expected.

First, upon receiving confirmation from the White House (yes they really do say "this is the White House calling" as if the home itself talked) instead of reacting in a businesslike manner and wondering what questions I might ask, my first reaction was "what do I wear?"

As it turned out there were only four women present including Mrs. Nixon and Mrs. Elliott Richardson and they certainly couldn't have cared less what I wore. The other woman reporter was three times my age and probably a dowager whom the Republicans hoped to persuade to donate to the next campaign.

Getting my press credentials was very easy and rather unexciting. All they asked for was a press card and then handed me a tag. No questions on my political beliefs and no search of my purse.

I entered the room where the press conference with Nixon's aides and Secretary Richardson was to be held and realized that maybe this was a bigger deal that I realized and nearly panicked. However after meeting a number of newsmen I had known many years ago, I enjoyed the usual 'shoptalk.'

The conference was slightly dull (due in part to some of the unimaginative questions asked) and following an hour of the open conference nearly 100 of us were ushered into a smaller room to hear presentations by various cabinet officials and advisors.

While this was billed as a 'news briefing' I got the feeling that we (members of the media) were being asked to 'support' administration policies in the interest of national unity. Nonetheless, it was interesting to hear the various terms which are thrown around frequently like "revenue sharing" "welfare reform," "government reorganization" and others, explained thoroughly.

When the President arrived, there were no heralding trumpets or thunderous ovations, merely the announcement of "The President of the United States" and in he walked amid polite applause. (Contrary to popular opinion, members of the news media do have manners and occasionally use them.)

The President gave his speech and then we were taken to a third room to be welcomed personally by Mr. and Mrs. Nixon. The prospect of meeting the President of the United States had, I must admit, excited me, but after sitting in a small room and hearing him speak as any other person, I felt slightly let down.

I imagined that upon meeting him and Mrs. Nixon I would at least float on air, however, I found that they were friendly, pleasant people and I felt none of the sensations I expected.

All of the cute remarks various friends had suggested (Hi Tricky Dicky, etc.) left me and I didn't get out much more than hello how are you? Which is a rather insane thing to say, but one doesn't react very fast with the President and his wife both talking and photographers taking pictures and a room full of newsmen.

At the end of the receiving line, media personnel were immediately handed cold drinks and escorted down an unbelievably large buffet line. I assume this was to keep us from fainting from hunger after spending nearly four hours with various administration officials.

The reception gave newsmen a chance to discuss area problems with the administration officials and get some "off the record" comments on local problems.

All in all it was a very exciting day, but it reaffirmed my long-felt conviction that American voters should take an opportunity to personally hear and see the people who are running our local, state and national governments and really listen to what they are saying. You might be surprised at what you'll learn.

Couple Leaves Suburbia

By PEACE STERLING
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — What's it like to stop the world and get off —to forsake a 10-room house, two-car garage and all the conveniences of modern suburbia —for a full-time life aboard a 30-foot sloop?

Janet Groene and her husband, Gordon, have been finding out for the past four years, and now Mrs. Groene says they have no thoughts of returning to the life they left behind.

"We enjoy being together, and since Gordon was a corporation pilot, we were being separated a lot," Mrs. Groene explains. "And it seemed we were having to generate to a lot of income to pay for a life we didn't really like.

"So," she continues, "we got out." It took the couple about a year to make the necessary arrangements. They settled on a boat because they wanted a low-cost way of life. And although sailing was new to both, Mrs. Groene says her husband picked it up naturally—"he just pulled the right strings and we went. I think sailing comes almost like second nature to pilots," she adds.

But Mrs. Groene had to learn a lot of things herself—like, where do you do laundry on a sailboat? How do you plan meals for 21 days or more without refrigeration? And once planned, how do you cook on a sailboat?

"As we went along, I learned a lot for myself, and a lot from other people," Mrs. Groene says. And now she has written a book to share her knowledge with others, "Cooking on the Go."

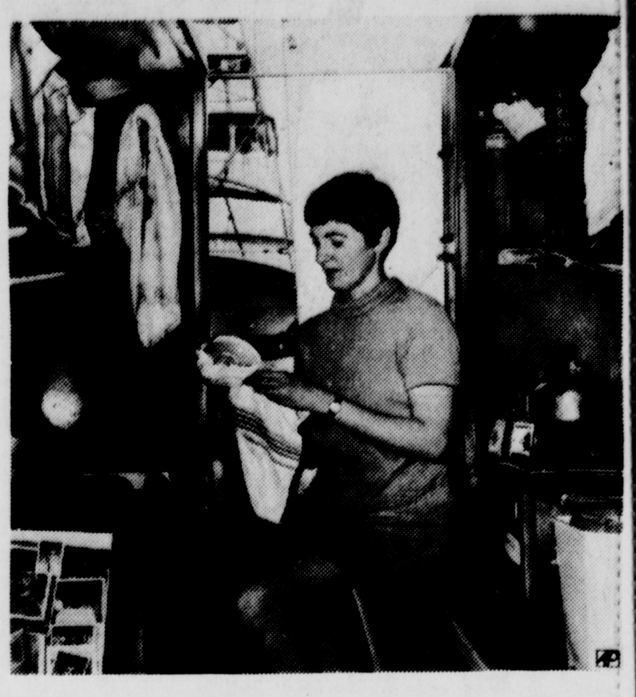
"The hardest thing was adjusting to the lack of space," she recalls. "There's no counter room, and I have only two burners." She says her pressure cooker has been invaluable because it makes the best use of fuel. Her other utensils are a covered aluminum skillet which also serves as an oven, a sauce pan and a tea kettle.

"One thing that's important is to have good, heavy, durable pots and pans," Mrs. Groene says. "This isn't easy cooking, and you need the very best."

In meal planning, rather than deciding on specific menus, Mrs. Groene says, she plans around meal values. "I know if I want to plan for three weeks, that means 21 dinners, 21 meat values, 21 vegetable values, and so on," she explains. "Under that system you can be flexible. I believe in having our lockers full of the right things, but not deciding what we want to eat until meal time."

The one thing people are most interested in, Mrs. Groene says, is how it is possible to live without refrigeration, and she has developed some interesting techniques to meet the situation —like making mayonnaise substitutes and devising cake recipes without eggs.

And she also has learned how to extend the life of fresh eggs. "Anything that seals the shells will prolong freshness," she notes. "Ideally you should begin with eggs that have never been refrigerated. But if you begin with supermarket eggs, warm them completely. Then, when they've stopped sweating and are dry, oil them or put vaseline on them. Or they can be dipped in boiling water for two or three seconds. Afterwards put them back into the carton with the small end down."



A Real Cook Out

"Cooking On The Go" is the title of Janet Groene's book, and it's apropos, since Mrs. Groene cooks most of her meals in the tiny gally of the 30-foot sloop she and her husband live on. In the four years since the Groene's left suburbia, the author has devised numerous recipes that call for the use of only two burners, no oven and a minimum of cooking utensils.

Powder Puff Derby Is Now Underway

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The first two finishers in the 25th annual Powder Puff Derby were expected to land at Ryan Airport here today after a 2,400 mile flight from Calgary, Canada.

The majority of the 140 aircraft which left the Alberta Province city Monday morning were expected to land at the Baton Rouge finish line Wednesday, before the 6 p.m. Thursday deadline.

Ramonia Stoat, pilot, and Charlene Poe, copilot, of Ft. Smith, Ark., and the duo of Marion Jayne, pilot, and Mimi Stigg, copilot, of Palatine, Ill., were to land first, but the winner of the event will not be known until Friday.

Winners will be determined through a complex formula of elapsed time and handicaps and not according to the order in which they are at the finish line.

It is the first north-south flying of the race, which previously has gone from coast to coast.

All contestants got off the ground in Canada without any serious mechanical troubles, but some had red faces.

One pilot shipped the keys to her airplane ahead to Baton Rouge and had to send for a locksmith.

Another, Mrs. Frank Salles of Baton Rouge, had to send for the hotel manager Monday morning when her pet monkey and flying companion Cherie, locked herself in the bathroom.

Pilots in the race, a commercial venture sponsored by a cigarette company, are competing for a $25,000 purse with $10,000 going to the winner.

There are 10 official landing sites along the course, but the women are required to land at only three—Rapid City, S. D., Lincoln, Neb., and Little Rock, Ark.

All flight times registered at points on the way are sealed and sent immediately to Baton Rouge.

Planes are reported scattered over several states in the second day today of the contest.

Twenty-nine contestants stayed overnight at the Jefferson County Airport in Broomfield, Colo., an optional landing point, and left as dawn broke early today. Contestants fly only during daylight.

Social Calendar

Information to be used in the social calendar must be turned into the women's editor at least four days in advance of the event. Only the organization's name, time and meeting place will be used.

THURSDAY

Ladies Auxiliary to Old Covered Barracks No. 820 will meet at 7:30 p.m. at Labor Hall, 1102 East Third.

FRIDAY

Sedalia Garden Clubs will meet as follows: Club 1 with Mrs. W. C. Cain, 1213 South Carr; Club 2 at noon with Mrs. Fred Lange, 907 West Broadway; Club No. 3 at Amy's Party Barn, 800 East 24th; Club No. 6 at noon with Mrs. Wilson Harbit, 1804 West 18th; and Club No. 7 at noon with Mrs. John Devine, 925 East 10th.

Nuns Make Cosmetics For Funds

MELBOURNE (AP) — Thirty-six women here spend five hours a day making cosmetics, but not one of them ever uses any.

Each day they gather in their two room brick laboratory and mix potions for the beautification of women.

The 36 are Sisters of the Carmelite order—an order of nuns which emphasizes silence and contemplation—and they have no need for the luxuries of the modern day woman.

The sisters went into the cosmetic business in 1966 when they found the upkeep of their monastery was becoming too much for their finances. The Mother Prioress says: "We needed money to maintain our monastery, and after hearing that the Cistercian order of monks was making and selling cosmetics in England we decided to give it a try."

They have their own special formula and their products have the brand name Monastique.

Among them are Cardinal after shave and talc for men, and Fleur de Carmel perfumes and skin lotions for women.

All told they have 36 items in their range and Sister Ellen-Marie, 25, confessed that "very occasionally we do try a little perfume and skin lotion, but never the makeup."

Polly's Pointers

Campers' Idea On Cleaning Coffee Pot

DEAR POLLY — We have been campers for 12 years so I want to tell Shirley she could rub cake soap on the outside of her camping pans and coffee pot and the black will wash off easily. Also, use good old sal soda in the washing water and in a strength stronger than directed. — LUCILLE

DEAR POLLY — It is obvious that Shirley was never a Girl Scout or she would have known how to remove smudges from the outside of her coffee pot and cooking pans when camping. One of the first camping rules a Girl Scout learns is to always coat the OUTSIDE of such pots with a liquid detergent before cooking and the black soot will wash off easily. Also, be careful after cooking because the soot can come off on clothing. — BEVERLY

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I would like to know how to remove that coating from nonstick pans when it has started to peel. Is it safe to use them when part of it has already come off? Mine is a heavy aluminum skillet and someone told me this could be poisonous. — BERNICE

DEAR POLLY — When making candy or caramel apples I butter the INSIDE of a WAXED PAPER sandwich bag and slide an apple in. They never stick to the bag. This is great for bake sales. — B. B.

DEAR POLLY — I suggest that Delores try using a new silicon-adhesive that is on the market for holding together the breaks in her cut glass vase. Pieces can even be put in the dishwasher after its use. — ARLENE.

Conservation Tax To Fund Program

A couple of weeks ago we commented about an upcoming meeting of the Citizens Committee For Conservation, and the impact this group would have on Missouri's conservation program.

Now the committee has met and formulated a plan to raise additional revenue for the Conservation Department, which currently is stretching its budget — realized almost entirely from hunting and fishing license fees — to the limit.

The citizens group has recommended adoption of a tax on soft drinks, with the estimated $20 million a year this would generate going into Conservation Department coffers to provide an expanded program.

The committee is currently drawing up an initiative petition on the tax, which will be presented to the voters in November, 1972.

A total of 90,000 signatures will be required to get on the ballot, but committee chairman Ted Scott of Buffalo, Mo., has set his sights at 150,000 signatures as an indication of grassroots support for the goals of his group.

The soft drink tax is levied in seven states, and based on North Carolina's experience is expected to yield about $21 million a year in Missouri. This is the amount that the Citizens Committee figures will be needed to enlarge the scope of the Missouri Department of Conservation.

What are the goals of the Citizens Committee? More management of non-game species, establishment of educational wildlife areas and extensive acquisition of wildlife, forestry and recreational lands, to name a few.

Of course the Conservation Department will continue to be responsible for the maintenance of fish and game programs, an area where the department has earned a reputation as the best in the nation.

But the interest in preserving nature has gone beyond the needs of hunters and fishermen, and it is toward this end that the Citizens Committee For Conservation is working. To the extent that the soft drink tax will fund such an undertaking, we support it, and urge all Missourians to sign the initiative petitions.

Le Duc Tho Return Raises Paris Hopes

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The key to a Vietnam settlement isn't the new Communist peace plan so much as the appearance in Paris of North Vietnam's politburo member Le Duc Tho.

He left Paris 14 months ago with the terse announcement that he wouldn't return until he had an agreement in his pocket.

To bring him back, President Nixon has made a number of unpublicized overtures through Communist and neutral intermediaries. These secret soundings have now brought Le Duc Tho to Paris.

His appearance definitely is the result of intricate backstage diplomacy. In making the secret arrangements, Hanoi had insisted he talk to someone with more authority than Ambassador David K. E. Bruce. It's no coincidence, therefore, that Le Duc Tho arrived at the same time Henry Kissinger, the President's national security adviser, also scheduled a trip to Paris.

North Vietnamese diplomats in Paris had complained that Bruce was unfriendly. Both of his predecessors, Averell Harriman and Henry Cabot Lodge, had maintained cordial personal relations with the North Vietnamese. But Bruce has been cold and formal.

This is one reason, the intermediaries hinted, that the North Vietnamese have refused to hold secret meetings in the Paris suburbs such as took place under Harriman and Lodge.

Washington has also treated Bruce more as a glorified spokesman than a negotiator. The Paris delegation has been restricted, for example, to the most routine intelligence about the war they are supposed to be settling. The top-secret stuff — battle plans, position papers, contingency plans and policymaking documents — aren't sent to Paris.

The air strikes at missile sites and other tactical targets in North Vietnam last November caught Bruce completely by surprise. He received his first word of the attacks from the North Vietnamese.

Annoyed, he directed his military liaison man, Lt. Gen. Julian Ewell, to send an urgent message to the Pentagon requesting more details. Admiral Thomas Moorer, the Joint Chiefs chairman, sent back a Washington Post account of the raids. The reply was regarded in Paris as an insulting message to Bruce, suggesting he should be satisfied with what he reads in the newspapers.

Meanwhile, Le Duc Tho still has no agreement in his pocket, but meaningful peace negotiations may now be possible.

Footnote: Washington is keeping an anxious eye on Saigon, which in the past has sought to snag the Paris negotiations. This is the reason, apparently, that Kissinger is traveling to Paris by way of Saigon. The U. S. has also taken the precaution, in the past, of intercepting the secret messages between South Vietnam's top people in Paris and Saigon. The South Vietnamese messages that have fallen into our hands have been identified by the code name "Gout." The National Security Agency, which handles secret codes and communications, stamps the intercepted messages "immediate precedence" and sends them by teletype to the White House marked "Exclusive for Dr. Henry A. Kissinger-White House." At the bottom of each message, the date and time of interception is given.

Hoover and Tamm — For years, the International Association of Chiefs of Police passed fulsome resolutions in praise of "The Honorable J. Edgar Hoover." It didn't detract from Hoover's glory that the resolutions were quietly prepared by the FBI and approved in advance by its director. But lately, Hoover has been feuding with the IACP's executive director, Quinn Tamm, himself a former FBI official. Hoover's supporters claim that Tamm botched up almost every top job at the FBI. Tamm's friends say he not only had a great career at the FBI but that Hoover himself recommended him for the IACP job. They say it was only after Tamm began to get personal publicity and to emerge as a rival to Hoover as a law enforcement spokesman that the FBI chief turned against him. It now looks as if Hoover, at last, may win the feud. The IACP's board is talking about firing Tamm for making "indiscreet statements."

Under the Dome — Senators Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., and George McGovern, D-S.D., two presidential hopefuls who are frequently critical of military spending, didn't bother to show up for the crucial vote on limiting the Pentagon budget to $68 billion...Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., who has a habit of rubbing perfume across his pudgy fingers and dabbing a little on his chin, also has a curious method for sorting mail. He spreads the letters on a table, picks out correspondence from all the notables, and then discards the leftovers...Rep Jim Burke, D-Mass., uses three different form letters thanking his constituents for their "recent correspondence," "recent warm letter" or "recent friendly letter'...Sen. David Gambrell's supporters are nervous because one of the new senator's aides turns out to have a criminal record. The aide, a black named Benny Smith, was convicted two years ago for violation of the state tax law. Gambrell is standing by Smith, who has made restitution to his state.

No Favoritism — Transportation Secretary John Volpe likes to tell this story on himself. Once when he was in a desperate hurry, he found his official plane 18th in line for take-off at New York City's La Guardia Airport. An associate suggested to Volpe, since he's in charge of the Federal Aviation Administration, that he ask his pilot to radio the tower requesting immediate clearance to take off. Volpe gave the order to the pilot who reported back a few moments later: "Mr. Secretary, the men in the tower send you their regards and instructed me to tell you we are still 18th in line for take-off."

Traffic In Drugs To Grow

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA News Analyst

WASHINGTON (NEA)—If information now in hand is correct, the heroin traffic with American troops in Vietnam is likely to get worse despite U.S. efforts.

Cromley

Strong attempts will be made by the men now profiting from that trade to expand the distribution system in the United States to service the addicts they have developed in the Far East.

Some of this information comes in letters from a friend in close contact with the Vietnamese police, some from American officials charged with keeping an eye on illegal Vietnamese traffic and some from American customs officials, who make no bones about the difficulty they face in preventing heroin smuggling.

So far as can be gathered, the principal bankrollers — the men who furnish the funds and rake in the bulk of the profits after agents, officials, transporters and sellers are paid off — are an interconnected group of Chinese financiers in Hong Kong, Singapore and Macao.

These men are international, with business associates in Thailand, Laos, Malaysia, South Vietnam, Burma and Communist China. In the main, however, the top men are themselves believed to be neither Communist or non-Communist.

A friend who is an officer in the opium detail of the Thai police says that some members of the Chinese communities in several nations work together in a close "family" relationship similar to that of the Mafia in the United States, with their own codes, "kinship" loyalties and enforcement procedures.

The bankrollers are "businessmen" who get into any field where the profits are large and the risks small. They move from one type of operation to another according to opportunity. Opium, from which heroin is refined, is just another profitable business venture. The financial wealth, the wide connections and the tightknit nature of the high command of these operations make successful attacks on the structure most difficult.

The opium is grown principally in northern Burma, Laos, Yunnan Province in mainland China and northern Thailand. In considerable measure it moves down through Thailand. Where the conversion is made into heroin is not clear at this time.

It is estimated that 1,000 tons of heroin a year moves out of Thailand, but this figure cannot be confirmed as of now.

Most of the heroin coming into South Vietnam probably moves on a variety of planes, some Vietnamese-run, some American, some military and some civilian. It is thought that some of the men connected with the operation are Vietnamese and some American. Some officials suspected (and named in correspondence by U. S. officials) are closely related to high officials in the South Vietnamese government.

Though the bankrollers have wide trade, financial and official associations throughout Southeast Asia, their connections with heroin distributors in the United States are believed limited, and it may take some time to develop efficient connections, most American distributors being associated with European or Latin-American rings.

But the Hong Kong-Singapore-Macao men do have relationships with a number of shady trading companies in the United States and other countries in connection with some of their corrupt import-export ventures. These associations could conceivably be utilized in making the contacts necessary for developing the heroin trade here.

Viet Cong POW Offer Boxes in President Nixon

By CARL T. ROWAN

WASHINGTON — The Viet Cong offer to release American prisoners in return for a total U.S. military withdrawal this year has kindled prayerful hope in the hearts of the POWs' relatives.

Rowan

But those relatives must not yet start dreaming of having their loved ones home for Christmas. That shrewd Viet Cong offer raises some extremely difficult questions for President Nixon, who is placed over quite a barrel where American public opinion is concerned.

Mr. Nixon surely is mindful of recurring charges that he has made the POWs pawns by asserting that U.S. troops will remain in South Vietnam until our prisoners are freed. He will find it very difficult to reject outright a clear, direct offer of prisoner exchanges for a U.S. withdrawal, with both operations commencing and ending at the same time.

But one towering difficulty is that the Viet Cong ask that the United States "withdraw from South Vietnam ALL troops, military personnel, weapons, and war materials of the United States and of the other foreign countries in the U.S. camp and dismantle ALL U.S. bases in South Vietnam."

This means that to get the prisoners back this year President Nixon is asked to abandon any plans to leave a residual force of 50,000 Americans in South Vietnam.

It also means that the President is being asked to forget his other condition that U.S. troops will remain until the South Vietnamese have the capability to defend themselves. The Viet Cong offer specifically demands that the U.S. "stop the policy of 'Vietnamization'."

Is Mr. Nixon willing to say to the Saigon government, "Getting those prisoners home is of such overriding importance in the United States that we have got to pull out, and if Saigon is not ready to defend itself, I'm sorry"?

Americans ought to be perfectly clear as to what this means. The Communists are saying that the United States must abandon the South Vietnamese to their own devices. That will be a very difficult thing for Mr. Nixon to do after an investment of 54,943 American lives and the wounding of 300,510 more Americans pursuant to a commitment to guarantee "self-determination" for South Vietnam. Especially when Mr. Nixon knows that the South Vietnamese are far from prepared to defend themselves in the wake of a total U.S. withdrawal by the end of 1971.

Even if Mr. Nixon can resolve these moral, political, and military problems, there are monumental physical barriers to total withdrawal in less than six months.

Sen. Barry Goldwater (R.-Ariz.), a retired Air Force general, told newsmen recently that the transportation problem is of such magnitude that it will take two full years for the U.S. to bring back all men, weapons, and war materials.

So when the Viet Cong talk of dismantling all U.S. bases as a condition for returning the POWs, the Communists have set a condition that precludes all prisoners being home this Christmas.

If Mr. Nixon decides that domestic pressures require a positive response to the Viet Cong proposal, the best that is likely to happen will be the return of some prisoners, with others held back for release as U.S. withdrawal continues in 1972.

The Viet Cong have offered assurances that remaining American troops will not be attacked by proposing a cease-fire once agreement is reached on prisoner exchanges and withdrawal. Their seven-point peace proposal even undertakes to pledge that there will be no bloodbatch of South Vietnamese once a new "government of national concord" is formed in South Vietnam.

But the Viet Cong offer makes it clear that there is no role for South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu in any reconciliation of the North and South. Thus the Saigon government is bound to oppose the Viet Cong proposal and to plead with the United States not to fall for such "trickery."

The dilemma here is that what promotes Thieu's political survival could promote the political demise of Richard M. Nixon. Not only is there strong emotional concern about the prisoners in the United States, but a growing sentiment for a speedier withdrawal.

Hanoi has played an ace, and from a kibitzer's viewpoint it appears that Mr. Nixon is out of trumps.

When today's hand was played at the Louisville Regional in April, every South player made the small slam in spades, but practically no one bid it. Dave Siebert of Little Rock and Jack Blair of Tulsa did and we feel their sequence is worth study.

Dave's spade overcall was normal and Jack decided to explore with a two-diamond cue bid. He was going to wind up in spades, but wanted to explore slam possibilities. Daves' two-spade bid temporized and Jack tried three clubs. The cue bid had initiated a forcing sequence, so he wasn't worried about being dropped there.

Daves' hand had suddenly improved, so he bid three diamonds. Jack was not ready to raise spades as yet so he tried three hearts to get further information. Dave showed his club support. He didnt' know if Jack really had clubs, but he didn't care because Jack would know.

This club raise was enough for Jack to take full charge. He Blackwooded and then bid six spades. The bidding is well worthy of study. It is complicated, but expert bridge is.

There are two other points of interest. If Dave had really been void of diamonds, he would have responded six diamonds to the Blackwood four no-trump. If Dave held two diamonds and one heart, he wouldn't have cue-bid diamonds at all.

Devine, Prothro Face New Gridiron Battles

Editors' Note— Dan Devine, former Missouri University football coach, and Tommy Prothro, the former head football mentor at UCLA, are veterans of college football wars. But the coming season they will make their initial appearances as head coaches in the National Football League — Devine with the Green Bay Packers and Prothro with the Los Angeles Rams.

This is part one of a three-part series dealing with their feelings and ideas as the 1970 professional football season approaches.

By MIKE RATHET and WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — Can two former college coaches improve the level of play in professional football?

Tommy Prothro, who left UCLA for the coaching job with the Los Angeles Rams, and Dan Devine, who stepped into Lombardi country by leaving the University of Missouri for the Green Bay Packers, say they not only can but should—after seeing some pro performances "that a junior high school coach wouldn't put up with."

In this first of a three-part series, both discuss their reasons for accepting their new challenge.

The questions and answers:

Rathet: It would probably be most appropriate if we started by having both of you explain your decision to leave the college coaching ranks for pro jobs, which most people consider less secure.

Prothro: The reason I went into pro coaching is that over the years I've come to decide, contrary to what I thought six or eight years ago, that pro football is bigger than college football.

Rathet: Dan, did you have the same appreciation—that pro football was bigger than college football?

Devine: Basically that would be it. This came down to a decision where I just couldn't say no to it. I didn't say yes right away but it was something I hadn't done, something I wanted to do.

Grimsley: Dan, did you have any feeling that in moving from college to pro ball you were getting into water over your head?

Devine: No. If I had that feeling I wouldn't have made the move.

Prothro: On the other hand ... if you move across the street you face a new situation and you always realize that it may turn out a little different from what you've done before.

Grimsley: Bear Bryant, Alabama coach, said the reason he never went into pro football was because he gets a kick out of developing players and a pro coach gets players already developed. Do you believe a player is beyond development once he becomes a pro?

Prothro: I think a lot of pro people feel this way. But I intend to try and develop players on our team.

Rathet: When you're talking about developing, what do you mean? ...

Prothro: I mean I talked to our football squad and I told them "it may sound strange to you for me to tell you—some of whom are the best or among the best in the world at what you do—but I intend to try and improve the way you are doing it."

Devine: As far as developing players is concerned, you look at film when you are playing an opponent in college and you see some guys pretty weak in fundamentals. Suddenly those people appear on the pro scene, and they're still just as weak in fundamentals. You'd be astounded if I sat down and showed you the film of Green Bay-Chicago. If you took the uniforms off them, you'd see some plays that a junior high school coach wouldn't put up with. Some of the fundamentals are atrocious and if I didn't feel that I could at least correct some of those things I'd be one lousy football coach.

Grimsley: Dan, the old college guys says that pro football is dull, that it's too stylized, whereas college football gives you unpredictability. Is there that great a difference between the kind of football played in college and that played in the pros?

Devine: I'd be less than honest if I didn't say I'm going to miss that goal line stand where the whole student body and the cheer leaders—you know, when everybody is up there yelling. You probably can't copy that. By the same token, in the last five years, I've seen a real trend in the colleges to play the so-called pro game as opposed to what some people call the so-called college game. Five years ago no one we played used the so-called pro defense. Last year we played 11 teams, and nine used the pro defense. So there is more similarity between the games than people think.

Grimsley: How do you feel about that Tom?

Prothro: I think any time you have 26 teams in one category and 1,000 in another the 26 of them are going to be more stereotyped. If there were eight they would be more stereotyped than the 26. There are more college teams so there's going to be more divergence of offenses and defenses.

An All Star?

Cash Drives In 6 in Win

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Norm Cash is really going places this year—everywhere, in fact, but the All-Star game. At least he doesn't plan on it.

The hot-handed Detroit first baseman, who finished second to Baltimore's Boog Powell in the All-Star voting, believes American League Manager Earl Weaver won't choose him to the squad.

"I don't think he'll change his mind overnight, either," said Cash.

Weaver may have second thoughts, though, after what happened Tuesday night: Cash drove in six runs with two, three-run homers to lead the Tigers to a 12-7 romp over the New York Yankees.

To further spice the All-Star situation, Powell was taken out of action Tuesday night with a sore wrist as the Orioles split a twi-night doubleheader with Washington. Baltimore won the first game 6-2 and Washington the second, 3-2.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Boston Red Sox nipped the Cleveland Indians 3-2; the Oakland A's topped the Chicago White Sox 9-4; the Kansas City Royals nudged the Milwaukee Brewers 1-0 and the California Angels turned back the Minnesota Twins 7-5.

Cash was runnerup for the Dream Game in Detroit next Tuesday despite an all-around better offensive performance than Powell's. He's hitting .290 to Powell's .220, has a league-leading 19 homers to Powell's 14 and has scored 37 runs to Powell's 36. Boog leads in runs batted in, 54 to 47.

The Tiger first baseman, having his best year so far, says he's read in newspapers that Weaver won't pick him as an All-Star sub "because he has a lot of guys who can also play first base."

Powell, meanwhile, was lifted from the second game after striking out in the first inning. He swung weakly at three pitches and twice dropped the bat in pain. Team doctors say Powell needs a few days rest and a new wrapping will be used on the sore right wrist next time out.

Cash unloaded a three-run homer in the second inning when the Tigers tagged New York starter Stan Bahnsen for seven runs—their biggest single inning outburst of the year. Cash then crashed a three-run shot off Gary Jones in the fourth.

Don Buford, Brooks Robinson and Merv Rettenmund unleashed first inning home runs, pacing Baltimore to its first-game victory that snapped Washington's six-game winning streak.

The Senators came back to take the nightcap as Orioles reliever Dick Hall let in the winning run with a wild throw on a bouncer in the seventh inning. Lenny Randle scored Washington's winner when Hall fielded the ball hit by Toby Harrah and threw it past catcher Ellie Hendricks, muffing the chance at the plate.

Frank Howard had a home run for Washington in each game.

Reggie Smith struck his 17th homer in the fifth inning and John Kennedy tripled in another tally in a two-run sixth to lead Boston to its 12th triumph in 15 games.

Reggie Jackson lashed three hits, including his 17th homer, to help Oakland rout Chicago. Diego Segui checked the White Sox on one hit until relief pitcher Tom Bradley hit a fifth inning homer. But by then, the A's had the game nailed down after scoring six runs in the top of the inning.

Ken McMullen tied the score with a two-run homer in the eighth inning and pinch-hitter Ken Berry followed with a two-run single as California defeated Minnesota.

Little-Known American Has Opening Lead

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Howie Johnson, a little known U.S. pro tour regular from Palm Desert, Calif., shot into the early lead today in the British Open golf championship with a four-under-par 69.

The 45-year-old veteran, who has not won a tournament since 1959, fired six birdies over Royal Birkdale's 7,080-yard par 73 layout.

One stroke back Liang Huan-Lu, a smiling Chinese golfer from Taiwan; John O'Leary of Ireland, and Tommy Horton of England.

Jack Nicklaus, the PGA champion and U.S. Open champion Lee Trevino, the co-favorites in the competition for the prestigious title of this ancient tournament, still were out on the course in balmy conditions with the sun streaming down.

Miller Barber of Sherman, Tex., was the first U.S. player in the clubhouse. The tour veteran fired a 34-37—71, two over the pace.

Another regular on the pro tour, left-hander Bob Charles of New Zealand, managed only a 77 after blowing to a 41 on the back nine.

Lu, 36, the holder of the Philippines and Thailand titles, posted five birdies as he overcame the wind blowing in from the Irish Sea.

Tennis Split Expected By Association

STRESA, Italy (AP) — The annual assembly of the International Lawn Tennis Federation is expected to ratify Wednesday a split with the world's top professional stars that would bar players such as Australians John Newcombe and Rod Laver from the major 1972 tournaments, including Wimbledon.

World Championship Tennis, the organization led by American millionaire Lamar Hunt that has 32 professionals under contract, is demanding more money to take part in the ILTF open tournaments and has threatened to promote its own tournaments in 1972 in competition with the ILTF.

"There must be an agreement," an Italian federation source said. "Wimbledon is probably the only tournament that could survive a couple of years without the professionals. But what about the others?

"The only defense for the ILTF would be that all national federations bar the professionals from their courts, but this is highly unlikely."

Amos Out at Plate

Amos Otis of the Kansas City Royals is tagged out at the plate trying to score in the fourth inning of the Royals-Brewers' game Tuesday night in Milwaukee. Otis tried to come home from third base on a wild pitch by Brewers' pitcher Marty Pattin. Catcher Ellie Rodriguez recovered the ball and threw to Pattin, who is shown making the tag on Otis. Kansas City got only four hits in the game, but they came at the right time as the Royals won the contest, 1-0.

Drago Ties Up Milwaukee, 1-0

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kansas City's Royals relied on six-hit pitching by Dick Drago Tuesday night and coupled it with a fourth-inning sacrifice fly by Cookie Rojas to edge Milwaukee 1-0.

Paul Schaal started Kansas City's winning sortie in the fourth with a walk. He went to third on a single by Amos Otis, and Otis stole second. The bases were loaded when Gail Hopkins walked.

Rojas nearly missed grand slam homers twice before he delivered his sacrifice fly that won the game.

Drago is now 9 and 4 for the season. He outdueled Marty Pattin, who allowed just three hits in eight innings.

Tonight Kansas City sends Bill Butler, 1-1, against Milwaukee's Bill Parsons, 7-9.

S-M Wins Senior BR Loop Title

S-M Sporting Goods clinched the championship for the second year in a row Tuesday night in the Senior Babe Ruth League as the defending champions grabbed a 4-3 win over V.F.W. S-M's win, coupled with Third National Bank's loss to Pepsi-Cola, vaulted them to the league title. Pepsi aided the pennant winners by downing Third National Bank by a score of 11-7.

Randy Kidwell was the winning pitcher for S-M; the victory moved his season's mark to 5-0 in the league and boosted his consecutive win mark in the past two years in the league to 11 straight.

The score was deadlocked 2-2 going into the top of the seventh, but V.F.W. took a 3-2 lead into the bottom of the inning.

However, S-M quickly tied the score at 3-3 before Bob Pledge drove in Chuck Huddleston to score the winning run in the contest. Pledge went four-for-four in the game.

Third National Bank suffered an 11-7 bombing by Pepsi-Cola in the second contest of the night. Steve Eck (3-3) was the winning pitcher; he struck out 12 in getting the decision. Mark Jones suffered the loss.

The slugfest went on until 11:30 p.m. in Liberty Park Stadium.

Boxers To Appear On Frazier Card

HOUSTON (AP) — Two opponents were announced Tuesday for July 14 exhibition matches with heavyweight champion Joe Frazier.

Promoter Harian Haas said Frazier will box two-round exhibitions with Cleveland "Big Cat" Williams and James Helwig in the Astrohall.

Williams, once a ranking heavyweight contender, lost a shot at the title here Nov. 14, 1966, when he was defeated by Muhammad Ali.

Helwig, a 200-pounder from Dallas, was a starter as a sophomore on the Texas Christian University football team last year.

Rodgers Will Play for Huskers

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — University of Nebraska football Coach Bob Devaney says Johnny Rodgers will be allowed to play football this fall although the NU flanker last month was placed on two years probation after a guilty plea to a felony charge of larceny to a person.

Rodgers, 19, sophomore star last season, entered the plea in connection with the robbery of a Lincoln service station in May 1970. Two other men have pleaded guilty to the same charge, but have not been sentenced.

Devaney, who also is NU athletic director, said Rogers will be on two years' probation at the university.

"We do not condone John's actions in any way," Devaney said Tuesday night, "but we also feel that to deprive him of the opportunity to play football would work against the aims of probation already established."

University officials earlier ruled that Rodgers would be permitted to continue in school if given a suspended sentence or probation.

Rodgers led the national champion Cornhuskers in pass receiving, kickoff and punt returns last fall and was third in team scoring.

Devaney said the decision to place Rodgers on probation and permit him to participate in football was made by the coaching staff "after very careful deliberation."

Devaney said the staff felt they should "follow the pattern of the Lancaster County Court, the University of Nebraska student tribunal and the University of Nebraska dean of student development's office" in taking the action toward Rodgers.

NL All Stars

Aaron, Mays Head Choices

NEW YORK (AP) — Atlanta's Hank Aaron and San Francisco's Willie Mays, two of baseball's all-time greats, and Pittsburgh's Willie Stargell, the major league leader in home runs and runs batted in, were named today as the starting outfield for the 1971 National League All-Star team.

Aaron, starting for the 12th time and appearing in his 20th All-Star game, was the top vote getter in both major leagues with 1,119,306 votes out of 2,396,895 ballots cast.

Mays, also named as a starter for the 12th time and playing in his 22nd All-Star game, was second in the NL with 1,084,887 votes.

Stargell collected 851,161 votes, far ahead of fourth-place finisher Lou Brock of St. Louis, who had 432,575.

San Francisco will be the only team with two starters for the National Leaguers when they oppose the American League in the classic at Detroit in a night game July 13. In addition to Mays, the Giants' Willie McCovey will be at first base.

Completing the starting NL infield will be second baseman Glenn Beckert of Chicago, shortstop Bud Harrelson of New York and third baseman Joe Torre of St. Louis. The catcher will be Johnny Bench of Cincinnati.

Bench was the only other National Leaguer to garner more than a million votes. He received 1,060,651 in the balloting announced by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Bench, Aaron, Mays and Beckert are repeaters from the 1970 starting squad.

Third baseman Brooks Robinson of Baltimore led the AL voting with 1,110,468. Picked to join Robinson in the infield were shortstop Luis Aparicio of Boston, second baseman Rod Carew of Minnesota and first baseman Boog Powell of Baltimore. Ray Fosse of Cleveland was selected as the catcher.

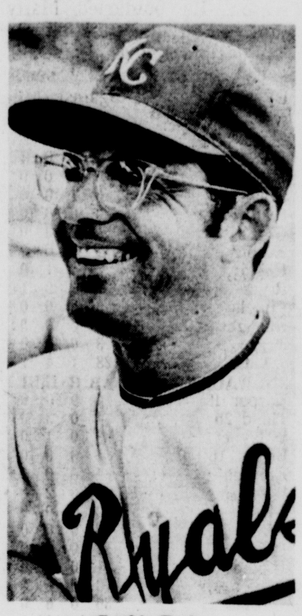
Chosen to start in the outfield were Carl Yastrzemski of Boston, Tony Oliva of Minnesota and Frank Robinson of Baltimore.

Each of the starters selected by fans throughout the United States and Canada must play three innings.

Rojas' Bid Fails

O's Head AL Picks

NEW YORK (AP) — The world champion Baltimore Orioles placed three men on the American League All-Star team, including third baseman Brooks Robinson, the No. 1 vote-getter in final balloting announced Tuesday by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.



Cookie Rojas
Third in Voting

Robinson, who drew 1,110,468 of the more than 2,300,000 ballots cast in what is believed to be the largest computerized vote ever taken in sports, will be joined by teammates Boog Powell at first base and Frank Robinson in the outfield.

Rounding out the Al's starting infield for the 42nd All-Star Game at Detroit are second baseman Rod Carew of the Minnesota Twins and shortstop Luis Aparicio of the Boston Red Sox. The catcher will be Ray Fosse of Cleveland.

Frank Robinson will be joined in the outfield by Carl Yastrzemski of Boston and Tony Oliva of Minnesota.

Kansas City's second baseman Cookie Rojas placed third in the balloting for the starting slot at that position. Rojas polled 308,636 votes, while starter Carew gathered in 560,837.

It will be the 10th All-Star appearance for Frank Robinson, who has played for the American League four times and the National League six times.

Yastrzemski, Powell, Carew and Aparicio also are repeaters from last year's team.

The eight winners in the fan balloting conducted throughout the United States and Canada must play three innings. The balance of the squad, including pitchers, will be named by Manager Earl Weaver of the Orioles.

The closest voting revolved around the third outfield position, with Frank Robinson edging Bobby Murcer of the New York Yankees. Robinson collected 633,217 votes to 606,203 for Murcer.

Howe May End Long Ice Career

TORONTO (AP) — Gordie Howe's career as a major league hockey player may rest at 25 years, completed last spring when the Detroit Red Wings finished last in the East Division of the National Hockey League.

A painful arthritic wrist is the cause of his indecision. Soon after the session ended his announced that he would turn up at the Wings' training camp in September and base his decision on his playing condition. A month ago he announced he would play at least one more season.

"Now, I just don't know," he said here Tuesday. "This has been a trying year. My wrist has bothered me beyond relief, we had a big executive and player upheaval, and now, with the death of my mother a week ago, I'm really undecided.

"The best guess is that I'll probably turn up at camp and see how things go.

As for the troublesome wrist, Howe underwent surgery in Detroit after the 1969-70 season. He has rarely been without pain.

Northeast St. Is All-Sports Winner

KIRKSVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Northeast Missouri State College is the winner of the 1970-71 Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association all-sports championship.

The Bulldogs accumulated 28½ points in 10 categories, two more than runnerup Southeast Missouri.

The conference school with the fewest number of points is proclaimed the all-sports winner at the end of each academic year. The sports considered are football, cross country, basketball, swimming, wrestling, indoor track, outdoor track, golf, tennis, and baseball.

Following Northeast Missouri and Southeast Missouri with 28½ and 30½ points were Southwest Missouri, 37½; Northwest Missouri 38½; Central Missouri, 41; University of Missouri-Rolla, 46 and Lincoln University, 58.

Dock Ellis Gains 12th Straight Win

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

While Pittsburgh's Dock Ellis doubts that he'll start the All-Star Game, New York's disabled Jerry Koosman just wonders when he'll be able to pitch again.

And that pretty much sums up the fortunes of the Pirates and Mets over the past few days. With Ellis, 14-3, notching his 12th straight triumph, the Pirates downed Cincinnati 5-2 Tuesday night and opened a 5½-game spread in the National League East over the Mets, who lost to Montreal 5-1.

Elsewhere, Houston continued San Francisco's slide 5-2, the Chicago Cubs beat Los Angeles 3-1 and Atlanta beat Philadelphia 5-2. St. Louis and San Diego were not scheduled.

Asked if he anticipated being the NL starter next Tuesday against Oakland's sensational Vida Blue, Ellis replied, "I doubt if they'll start a brother from the American League and a brother from the National. Besides," he continued, "Sparky Anderson doesn't like me."

Anderson, the Cincinnati manager who will pilot the NL All-Stars, was puzzled by that.

"I don't know where he got that idea," Anderson said. "I have never spoken to him and he's never spoken to me. As I understand it, he is supposed to pitch again Sunday. That would give him only one day's rest for the All-Star Game. I realize the Pirates are in a division race and I would no more risk hurting Ellis than the man in the moon."

Roberto Clemente of the Bucs tripled in the sixth inning—his 2,800th career hit—and scored on Richie Hebner's sacrifice fly, breaking a 1-1 tie. Al Oliver's two-run triple wrapped it up in the eighth.

Ellis worked seven innings before a bruised shin—he was struck by Tommy Helms' single in the fourth—forced him to the sidelines. He's also had a touch of elbow trouble lately.

But he's continued to pitch and win. Koosman is a different story.

The Mets' once-prized southpaw lasted only one inning against the Expos, who clipped him for two runs on Ron Hunt's single, Ron Woods' triple and Rusty Staub's sacrifice fly. Then he went on the 21-day disabled list.

The Mets knew Koosman was hurting and had Gary Gentry warming up from the start.

"The muscles around the shoulder blade and side are all tight. Sometimes it gets so bad it even affects my breathing," said Koosman, who has had problems for several years and lost his blazing fast ball along the way. "My arm feels good and so does my shoulder. It's just that the muscles are tight and I can't get them loose."

Bill Stoneman's six-hitter—he fanned nine — doomed the punchless Mets to their sixth loss in seven games.

The Giants, who only swoon in June but apparently die in July, dropped their third in a row and seventh in 10 games.

O'Connors, Boonville Split Softball Tilts

PRAIRIE HOME — The Boonville Buds and the Mike O'Connor softball team of Sedalia split a doubleheader Tuesday night here.

Boonville was limited to only two hits in the opener, but made one of them count in the first inning as they scored the games' only two runs and hung on for a 2-0 shutout victory. Jack Parkhurst was the winning pitcher for the Buds; he scattered eight hits.

O'Connors bounced back in the nightcap and captured a 12-3 victory behind the pitching of Ed Drees and the hitting of Tom Hunter and John Higgins. Hunter blasted two homers in the contest, while Higgins added another.

O'Connors overall record stands at 37-4; they will host Marshall Dairy Queen at Housel Park Thursday night in a twinbill. The opening contest is slated for 7:30 p.m.

Depressed Ryun May Return

STOCKHOLM (AP) — An unhappy, depressed and ailing Jim Ryun, world record holder in the mile, was uncertain today whether he would continue his European tour following a last-place finish and a 4:17.3 time in a meet here Tuesday night.

"Not even after the defeat in the 1968 Olympics did I feel as disappointed as tonight," said the former Kansas star.

"The first lap I thought I was running well, but after one and a half laps I just could not breathe," explained the hay fever-ridden Ryun.

"We will see Wednesday. If I decide to continue, my next race will be in Oslo July 14."

Ryun, owner of the world record of 3:51.1 and with a best mark of 3:54.9 this year, finished 10th, nearly 23 seconds behind 1968 Olympic 1,500-meter champion Kipchoge Keino of Kenya, who was timed in 3:54.4—fastest in the world this year.

Keino, meeting Ryun for the first time since upsetting him in the Olympic Games four years ago at Mexico City, said he was surprised not to see the lean Kansas runner when he glanced back on the third lap.

Sweden's Ulf Hoeburg finished second in 3:57.6—a Swedish record. He was followed by John Mason of the United States in 3:59.2 and Sweden's Anders Gaerderud in 3:59.8.

Golf's Hottest Name

Trevino Seeks British Crown

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Lee Trevino, the man riding one of the hottest streaks in golf with the U.S. and Canadian Opens already in his pocket, set off in pursuit of the British title today with a putting worry on his mind.

"The players who start early will have a very, very big advantage over the boys starting later," Trevino said.

"The greens here at Royal Birkdale have been well watered. They've been soaked by the weather as well as the green keeper.

"By mid-afternoon the footprints of the earlier players will have crusted up and certainly will make putting more difficult."

Trevino was scheduled to start smack in the middle of the field. He's going out with British Walker Cup Captain Mike Bonallack.

Trevino is one of 150 players chasing this crown, first competed for in 1860.

All of the competitors agreed that there could be putting troubles for the late starters.

Norman Von Nida, 57-year-old maestro of Australian golf, commented: "These greens have been watered too much. The heavy traffic over the greens will leave footprints that could harden in the sun."

The betting odds fluctuated almost by the minute. Trevino was listed as 4-1 co-favorite with defending champion Jack Nicklaus Tuesday night.

By this morning Nicklaus was the clear favorite again at 4-1 with Trevino slipping back to 5-1.

The field is packed with stars. Charles Coody, the U.S. Masters champion, Gary Player, the South African who has collected every major title in golf, Billy Casper, former U.S. Open champion, left-hander Bob Charles from New Zealand, a former winner, and the home-grown Tony Jacklin who held both the U.S. and British Open titles two years ago, all are here to compete over Royal Birkdale's 7,080-yard, par 35-38—73 links by the Irish Sea.

After 36 holes the field will be cut to the 80 low scorers. Any who tie at that figure go forward to the third round.

The field again is cut after 54 holes and only the 60 lowest scorers go through to the last round Saturday.

Sen. Mike Mansfield

Military Crumbling With Troubles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield says the resistance capacity of the American 7th Army in Europe has become questionable with its soldiers beset by problems of "drugs, race and field comforts."

The Montana Democrat served notice he will launch a new campaign, probably this year, for phased cutbacks that would reduce the U.S. force in Europe to one division.

Last May the Senate defeated a Mansfield proposal for halving American forces in Europe by the end of 1971, but the senator claimed a majority of the Senate now wants substantial cuts in U.S. forces.

Speaking of the state of the 7th Army, Mansfield complained the force is over-officered with too many dependents—225,000 of them—around. He continued:

"In the beginning the 7th Army was a very good army. Now it is not because of such factors as drugs, race problems, field comforts and too many dependents. The 7th Army is caught in the middle. Ahead of it are the Russians. Behind it are their dependents. They're worried about both.

"In the days of Caesar the Roman legions were easily able to hold a line along the River Rhine—until they brought their families along. Then they became less alert and more domesticated. This is what the 7th Army has become. Their capacity to resist must be questionable the moment their families are on the scene." Other points made by Mansfield in a question-and-answer interview:

Q: Precisely when and how do you expect to revive your move in the Senate for cutting the number of U.S. troops in Europe?

A: Probably this year. In May we used a sledgehammer to make a dent in the thinking not only of the administration but also of the Europeans who should realize things cannot go on much longer like this.

Q: What do you intend asking for next time?

A: The aim will be to press for a graduated reduction, over a period of time, in the size of U.S. forces in Europe. Perhaps down to two divisions within a given period, then working down to President Eisenhower's old idea of keeping a single division in Europe.

Q: In what timescale?

A: By around the middle of the decade—1976 or thereabouts. Times are changing. It's up to Americans, and Europeans, to face up to the realities of this decade.

Q: What in your view are these realities?

A: The U.S. is maintaining too many troops there and is shouldering a lopsided burden it cannot afford. The Europeans have restored their economies. The Deutschmark is strong. The guilder is strong. The pound sterling seems to be strengthening. But the dollar is less strong.

We simply cannot afford the commitment any longer. We are spending more abroad than we should in view of our own economic situation.

Q: But isn't it true Europeans are doing more for themselves—for instance pitching in with an extra billion dollars worth of defense effort over the next five years.

A: An extra $200 million a year is far too little. The Europeans know it. We know it. The direct dollar cost to the U.S. of supporting our forces in Europe in 1970 was $1.731 billion.

Q: What do you say to the argument that cutting back now would weaken the position of the North Atlantic Alliance, NATO, just when the Soviets are showing an interest in negotiating balanced force reductions?

A: Russia already is in a position of advantage with troops in East European countries like Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia.

Q: But how can you reconcile cutting U.S. forces when NATO member-states promised to make no unilateral withdrawals?

A: Unilateral withdrawals already have taken place by the French, Portuguese, Canadians. The late President de Gaulle did so later warning us of his intentions for three years. Yet we went on building NATO pipelines and other installations in France and were caught short. The Portuguese for obvious reasons—meaning their troubles in Africa—make no contribution to NATO. Canada has cut as Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said he would in his election campaign.

Q: Who among the Europeans do you think could do more?

A: For a start the Germans should do more. It is true some Europeans, on both sides, would not like a strong Germany to rise again. The Germany of today is not the same as the old Germany. There are many safeguards—in the East as well as West—against that sort of revival.

Q: Unless Europe raises more conventional forces a cutback of the U.S. garrison would lower the threshhold of nuclear war. You are prepared for that?

A: Yep. There are 7,000 American tactical nuclear weapons already deployed in Europe. They have a deterrence for the other side. In addition modern transportation could swiftly bring reinforcements to Europe from the United States in a grave emergency.

Q: You remain, then, absolutely convinced of the need for big U.S. cutbacks and soon.

A: Of course. But I don't think I am against NATO. I am for it and always have been. But NATO's changed since 1949 just like everything has changed in nearly a quarter of a century. NATO used to be a shield. Today it's a symbol. And a symbol does not need so many troops and dependents.

Europeans, of course, are worried. But they cannot have it both ways—like trading and treating with the Russians and Chinese and then, fearing ultimate trouble, leaning too heavily on us for their protection.

Announce Cuban Exchange Of 18 American Citizens

MIAMI (AP) — Cuba's Fidel Castro's regime today announced the exchange of 18 American citizens in Cuba for four Cuban fishermen held prisoner by the United States.

The Cuban announcement carried by Havana Radio followed by several hours the transfer of the four Cubans from an American federal prison to a Cuban fishing boat in the Gulf of Mexico.

The Havana broadcast monitored in Miami said the 18 Americans would receive "all aid in leaving the country once the services and costs that they incurred were paid."

One of the 18 was already in Miami. Fritz Sprandel, 26, a lone canoeist forced ashore in Cuba May 22, was returned to this country Tuesday.

The other Americans—four aboard the yacht White Cloud, five aboard a sloop called the Saturna, and eight crewmen of a Florida tugboat—were expected to begin leaving the Communist island later today.

Havana Radio said that "in this manner the problem is resolved . . ." The broadcast referred to the incident involving the imprisonment of the four Cubans in this country and the subsequent detention of the 18 Americans in Cuba.

Five of the Americans, the four aboard the yacht White Cloud and Sprandel, had been sentenced by "Cuban revolutionary tribunals" to pay fines of $20,000 each.

The Cuban broadcast said these fines were reduced to $2,000 each. A similar reduction was made by American authorities for each of the four Cubans serving six month prison sentences at Eglin Federal Prison in Florida.

Their prison sentences also were suspended.

The Cuban fishermen were taken from Eglin prison Tuesday and transferred from a U.S. Coast Guard cutter to a Cuban fishing vessel near the Dry Tortugas islets in the Gulf, where they were arrested for fishing in U.S. territorial waters.

The first indication that an exchange was underway was the arrival in Miami Tuesday aboard a Cuban refugee flight of Sprandel, of Allentown, Pa.

Sprandel was forced ashore on the Cuban coast May 22 as he attempted to sail a one-man canoe from Key West, Fla., to Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula.

The Cuban fishermen were freed upon payment of reduced fines of $2,000 each and the suspension of the remainder of their jail sentences, the State Department said. They had been fined $10,000 and ordered to jail for six months.

Other Washington sources said four California men aboard the yacht White Cloud also would have fines imposed by the Cubans reduced to $2,000 each and would be allowed to leave the island.

The four—Bernard Bender, his sons Lauren and Michael, and Thomas Joseph McGuire—had been convicted along with Sprandel of entering Cuban waters illegally and fined $20,000 each. The action was seen as retaliation for the sentencing of the four Cubans by a U.S. District Court in Key West on May 9.

Sprandel could not be reached for an explanation of the conditions of his release.

Cancer Legislation Headed For Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to focus the fight against cancer headed for Senate passage today, creating a new, independent government agency.

The bill is a compromise of a measure introduced by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., in January and a proposal by President Nixon in May.

The Conquest of Cancer Agency would take over personnel of the 34-year-old Cancer Institute of the National Institutes of Health in nearby Bethesda, Md.

It would have independent status, reporting directly to the President, a feature sponsors say will give great impetus to the search for causes and cures of all forms of cancer.

Some senators expressed misgivings about the bill, saying they feared it was the first step in dismantling NIH—a group of medical study centers under the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. It has been called the finest biomedical research structure in the world.

Despite their doubts the senators said they had no plans to fight the legislation.

Kennedy is fighting for substantial funding for the agency, up to $1 billion by 1976, a level recommended by a panel of specialists appointed by the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee last year.

The NIH Cancer Institute had a $232-million budget in the last fiscal year. Nixon has asked and Congress already has granted a $100-million increase for the current year which began last Thursday.

Kennedy said the U.S. spent $125 per American on the Vietnam war in 1969, and 89 cents per person on cancer research. Yet, he said, cancer deaths last year were eight times the number of lives lost in six years in the Vietnam conflict.

The new agency would present its budget directly to the President, who would nominate a director.

Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., who filed dissenting views in the Labor Committee's report on the bill, said the argument for the new agency to operate outside of control of NIH had not been proved.

Staff For Center Planning Walkout

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Workers at the Western Missouri Mental Health Center said Tuesday they may have to strike, along with others across the state, to get the pay raise that was promised them as of March 1.

About 60 workers picketed the Kansas City facility, and there was growing talk they might close down the hospital if they do not receive the increase authorized by the Missouri Legislature.

The state notified the Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes on June 29 that the state did not have the money to pay the increases for March, April, May and June.

Employes were told Friday that most could expect an average raise of $45 a month in their next paycheck.

The superintendent of the center, Dr. Nicola Katf, said the employes have been waiting three years for a pay raise.

"You are playing with fire when you promise people something and then don't give it to them," Dr. Katf said.

Public Television in America Is on an Exciting Threshold

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) —Think of public television, and what image comes to mind?

If it's those deadly earnest and deadly dull shows the medium cloaked itself in for years, you are behind the times.

Public television, for the first time on the threshold of adequate financing, is acquiring a new image that is winning viewers grown impatient with commercial television's reluctance to experiment. PTV is establishing itself not only as the fourth network, but as a vigorous force pioneering new programming and giving a twist to old techniques.

"What we're putting together is a wholly new kind of television system," said David Ives, president of WGBH-TV, Boston, a leading PTV station and a major national production center. "If public television gets financed in the proper way, then you've eliminated a major factor that has distinguished commercial television: that you've got to please the widest possible audience."

PTV is now in its 18th year of existence and its second year as a network and it is approaching maturity with every hope that it can achieve the affluence necessary for its independence and health.

The first PTV program to be distributed by network was the Public Broadcast Laboratory's "PBL," which broke new ground with the magazine format in 1967. Now the Emmy-winning "Great American Dream Machine" has carried it to new dimensions.

In the coming fall season, while the commercial networks will be falling back largely on the tried and true, the Public Broadcasting Service will offer relief from the routine.

PBS has scheduled a Sunday night children's show, a musical magazine, a 90-minute special of the weekly one-hour "Hollywood Television Theatre," William F. Buckley Jr. in "Firing Line," a weekly "Black Journal," and new shows for "Masterpiece Theatre," "Great American Dream Machine," "The Advocates" and "The French Chef" with Julia Child.

William H. Kobin, vice president for programming at National Educational Television, said, "I think there is a commitment to attracting new viewers without sacrificing quality. There are many publics, and as public television I think we have an obligation to develop programs for as many of these viewers as possible."

Despite better shows and greater visibility, public television still has its problems. Increased funding is on the way, but a solution to permanent, long-range financing still eludes the system and the White House has yet to make a recommendation.

The corporation hopes to receive $35 million from Congress next fiscal year and to raise an additional $5 million from private sources.

"We're shooting for $100 million by 1975," said John Macy Jr., president of CPB. "Our objective is permanent financing because we're reaching the point where we need financial assurance. And we need the additional insulation that long-term financing provides."

The question of insulation from congressional second-guessing and the location of the corporation and network in Washington arouses some of the old infighting that characterized PTV in its salad days.

Some believe that this shift in power to Washington is a reason for fewer hard-hitting documentaries in recent years.

Kobin said, "I think it is a fact that this system is not very receptive to them. The nature of the system is such that more and more of the financing will come from Congress and the network structure of PBS is predicated on the fact that it is a station-controlled network. So if you have a combination of these two, financial dependence on Congress and control located in 200 stations, I think it adds up to a problem for producers."

Macy, who said he sees the corporation as a "heat shield" from interference," disagrees. "My feelings are those concerns are without substance. We've had no pressure from Congress. Nevertheless, I feel it is important to have added insulation because that possibility always exists."

Public Broadcasting's President

John Macy Jr., president of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, talks with a visitor in his Washington office. The corporation, which is still seeking a solution to long range financing for educational television, is the umbrella organization for all the nation's program production centers and public broadcasting stations.
